Two Dead, Two Bottles.
Turkey For All.
The Greatest Woman.
—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

SEBRING, Fla., Dec. 28.—Yesterday's newspapers emphasize the fact that life is brief. On the front page of F. B. Shutts' Miami Herald the following headings appear.

"Dentist Who Killed Woman Ends His Life."
"Unclad Bodies of Girl and Youth Found."
"Holiday Mishaps in South Take 59 Lives."
"Two Killed When Boiler Explodes."
"Citrus Grower's Body Recovered."
"Boy Hunter Killed in Shooting Accident."
"Child Drowned When Ice Breaks."
"British Consul Ends Life."
"Chokes to Death on Bone."
"Bullet Wounds Fatal."
"Yale Professor Takes Own Life."

And there were others.

THE CASE of the boy and girl found dead in Autora, Colo., puzzles the police. They wonder if it was a murder and suicide, or a suicide compact.

The couple, who had only recently met, were discovered with no clothing in a little cottage of the Starlite cottage camp. They were Harold Crawford, 19, and Miss Lillian Gould, 20, a sophomore at a Colorado college.

As they lay dead they were silent witnesses to the fact that prohibition has worked perfectly even in Colorado. Two bottles were found beside them, one empty, one containing liquor.

PRISONERS IN Sing Sing prison ate 214 turkeys on Christmas Day. Their guards had pork chops. The 24, in death cells, waiting for the electric chair, might order anything they wanted, and get it, including Mrs. Mary Field Dixon, convicted of drowning her son. She ate some of the white meat.

Non-criminals outside of prison and outside of jobs must have admired this governmental kindness.

THE NATIONAL Council of Women organized a "popular contest" to select the "12 greatest women leaders in the last 100 years of American history."

Mary Baker Eddy won with 102,762 votes. Jane Addams came next with 99,147 votes. All were admirable women and well chosen. BUT the greatest artist is he who paints the best picture, the greatest soldier is he who wins the greatest battle, and the greatest woman is she who produces the best child.

The two greatest women in American history during the past hundred years are the mothers of Abraham Lincoln and Thomas A. Edison.

IN A DRIVE for support the Federation of Jewish Philanthropic Societies announces a "minute week," the minutes being auctioned off to individual buyers at an average price of $11 per minute.

That seems a good price when you can hire able-bodied men to work six hundred minutes for two dollars, yet the price is not too high, quite apart from the admirable charity involved. The most important things, which are ideas, come in one minute and less.

The steam engine, sewing machine, steamboat are "ideas" that were born in a minute. No thought lasts more than a minute. Try to think of ONE steadily for 60 seconds. Not easy. In one minute some genius might find the idea that we need to end this depression. That would be worth more than eleven dollars.

THE FLORIDA alligator, descendant of ancient silurian monsters, is on his way to join the great auk, dodo and others in the realm of extinction.

In the past two months, Bremen, Germany, has received via the port of Jacksonville, four and a half tons of dried alligator skins to become wristbands, ankle bands, purses, valises, many novelties, including shoes for women. If you want to display a mounted alligator head, saying "I killed it, under such and such desperate condition," hurry.

IT WOULD be well for the world if sportsmen could transform into leather and fertilizer all the crocodiles that sun themselves on the shores of innumerable rivers in Africa. No crocodiles would mean no sleeping sickness.

Germs of that sickness dwell in the crocodile's blood. Tsetse flies, attracted by carrion decaying in the crocodile's jaws, gather the deadly germs unintentionally and implant them in the blood of men and cattle.

STRETCHED OUT in your bathtub, you are for scientific purposes as much of a giant as though you had your head on the shore at San Diego with your feet pressing against Waikiki Beach in Honolulu.

Compared to the small creatures which in their vast numbers are the real population of this earth, man is a giant such as no writer of fairy stories ever imagined. Dr. Ferguson in the Journal of Physical Chemistry reminds you that a man six feet tall is 72 million times as tall as many of the smallest living things.

AND YOU are COMPLICATED, to a fearful wonderful extent. You possess millions of brain cells, and in each of them there are many trillions of separate atoms, say 50,000,000,000,000 atoms to one cell, each atom a little solar system in itself.

Had Narcissus possessed modern information instead of looking at himself in a pool he would have studied himself in chemistry, physics and physiology and would have been more conceited than ever.

Council Set to Pass Salary Cuts

'REGULARS' LINE UP FOR BILL

Herron in Attack on 'Independent' Members

Giving a verbal spanking to the three "independents" in Council, President John S. Herron today said the 1933 salary bill will be passed by Council this afternoon by "at least five votes," representing the "regulars" in the city law making body. Herron's words were:

"Beyond a shadow of a doubt, the salary bill will pass Council today by at least five votes."

In order to balance the city budget, the "regular" majority in Council has included in its estimates recommended salary reductions of 16⅔ per cent for Mayor Charles H. Kline and other elected city officials.

The budget comes up for final action today and, if approved, the amended salary bill and appropriation bill will go to the Mayor for his signature.

REFUNDS EXPECTED

There has been no reduction in the salaries of the elected officers in the salary bill, but it is believed that an understanding exists whereby they will refund an amount comparable to the pay reductions in other parts of the payroll.

Amendments to the salary bill voted yesterday by the majority were contested by the three independent councilmen, P. J. McArdle, Robert Garland and Charles Anderson.

These three councilmen also voted "No" on the resolution introduced by Councilman Michael J. Muldowney recommending that the Mayor select first for dismissal those employes eligible for city pensions. The resolution was approved, 5 to 3.

SAVINGS NEEDED

That Council is counting on a salary reduction from the elected officers is indicated from official sources. At present, the total appropriations of $21,140,000 are $57,000 higher than the estimated revenues.

A 16 2-3 per cent salary cut for the elected officials would amount to approximately $39,000. It is believed that there are other sources from which Council will be able to find the necessary $18,000 to strike a balance for 1933.

On motion by Garland, the City Controller has been asked to furnish a statement today on whether the budget is balanced and whether in his opinion there will be a deficit at the end of 1933.

President of Council John S. Herron has expressed confidence that when the bills are sent to the Mayor they will be signed promptly. He declared that Council expects to sit as a budget committee throughout the year, and keep in close touch with expenditures.

7TH AVENUE HOTEL FIRE KILLS ONE

Guest Held in Probe Of Blaze Which Routs 150

One guest was suffocated, another was burned, three firemen were injured and 150 men and women in various stages of undress escaped when fire broke out in the Seventh Avenue Hotel in downtown Liberty avenue at 7:25 a. m. today.

More than a dozen pieces of fire apparatus rushed to the scene in answer to three alarms, and virtually all street cars pouring into the Downtown district were held up, delaying thousands of workers.

Frank Reed, 25, of Fairmont, W. Va., in whose room the fire was reported to have started, was arrested on a charge of suspicion after he had been treated at Mercy Hospital for burns. Inspector Frank R. Boyd quoted Reed as saying he didn't remember much about the fire.

The detectives said the fire probably started from a lighted cigaret.

MOTHER, GIRL SAVED

Mrs. Irene Trenary and her daughter, Ellen, 20, awakened by screams, huddled in their room, choked by smoke. Mrs. Trenary described the scene:

"We stayed there until flames came through the transom. Then we went into the next

DARING PLOT AT SHARON IN 1909 RECALLED

Week's Illness Fatal To Victim of Crime That Stirred U. S.

SHARON, Pa., Dec. 28.—Attorney William Whitla, 32, the "Willie" Whitla of the famous kidnaping case of 1909, died today in his East street home, a victim of pneumonia. He had been ill a week.

Back in the horse and buggy days, his kidnaping was a big news feature, and rated at that time what the famous Lindbergh kidnaping did early this year.

TAKEN FROM SCHOOL

Whisked away from the Sharon public school in a horse-drawn buggy by Jimmy Boyle, Sharon character, the boy was held in Cleveland for a week or more until $10,000 ransom was paid. Then the boy was returned to a hotel in Cleveland, which the kidnapers had designated.

For the kidnaping, Helen Boyle and her husband, Jimmy, were tried and convicted. Boyle was sentenced to life imprisonment and died in the Western Penitentiary. Helen was given 25 years, was paroled in 1919 and is now said to be living with her mother in Chicago.

SON OF ATTORNEY

Willie Whitla, about 8 at the time, was the son of James P. Whitla, wealthy attorney. Coupled with the apparent wealth of the family in marking Willie for kidnaping, was the wealth of relatives. Mrs. Whitla's sister was the wife of Frank H. Buhl, millionaire iron master of the town.

Within a short time after Willie's teacher had released the boy, the news was flashed that he had been kidnaped. The trail of the horse and buggy led to Warren, O., where trace of the boy and his abductor was lost.

RANSOM LETTERS

Then the family began receiving letters demanding money. The Perkins Detective Agency of Pittsburgh was called in on the case.

While the father nervously paced his room in the Cleveland

LEAP AT BLAZE SAVES ACROBAT

Clayton Cornell, 26, heaved a heartfelt sigh of relief today and thanked his lucky stars that he's an acrobat.

If he hadn't been, he might have lost his life in the Seventh Avenue Hotel fire. Instead, he lives by the grace of a spectacular escape.

He was trapped in his room on the top floor of the hotel. Let him tell it:

"The smoke gagged me and I threw open the window for air. Then I ran to the door, but flames shot at me. I climbed out the window and hung from the window sill by my finger tips.

"Then a man across the court (Louis Hentzy) yelled to the man in the room below mine. This man opened his window from the top and I could feel my finger tips slipping off the ledge.

"But I swung down and in about seven feet, and landed safely."

If he had missed, Cornell would have fallen 30 feet to probable death.

Bucharest Hotel Burns; Seek Bodies

BUCHAREST, Dec. 28.—(INS.)—Authorities expressed fears today that several persons had been killed in a fire which razed the Hotel Britannia, largest in the city.

Many guests, including women, were forced to leap from windows as firemen battled several hours to quell the flames.

Peggy and De Ruyter To Go in Vaudeville

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—(INS.)—Jack De Ruyter, of Park avenue, and Peggy Lawton Rich, former Follies dancer, will do a team act in vaudeville, Peggy announced today. De Ruyter was named as co-respondent in the recent divorce action brought against Peggy by her husband, Freddie Rich, orchestra leader. Rich won the case.

2 LINDY KIDNAP SUSPECTS HELD

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Dec. 28.—(INS.)—John Miller, of Jersey City, arrested at the request of New York city detectives active in investigating the Lindbergh baby kidnaping, was held in $25,000 bail today for a further hearing December 31 on a charge of "being a disorderly person."

The nature of the information from New York police upon which the arrest of Miller was based, was not revealed by Police Inspector John J. Walsh, of Jersey City, at whose request the high bail figure was set.

Miller, also known as "Lucky," "Whitey" and "John Hines," has been arrested several times on various charges, police said, and served a jail term on a charge of carrying concealed weapons.

Meanwhile, Hollister Demo, of Staten Island, was undergoing voluntary questioning in connection with the Lindbergh case and waiting for the arrival of Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon. Condon paid negotiators $5$0,000 for the return of the Lindbergh baby.

New Jersey authorities said they believed neither of the men had anything to do with the Lindbergh case.

'Buy American' Drive Spreads Through U. S.

The campaign of the Hearst newspapers to induce Americans to "Buy American" has met with intensely enthusiastic response. Reports from many parts of the country are that the movement is achieving energetic support. It has been commended by many important leaders.

The program gained momentum in the Pittsburgh district today as business leaders and others considered the advantages of the plan.

Henry W. Tranter, president of the Tranter Manufacturing Company, declared:

"It's a good move, particularly to counteract similar programs such as in the British Empire.

"I believe there is enough loyalty in America to make such a plan successful if the idea is properly presented, and our people are shown that our own made goods are actually superior in quality to foreign made goods dumped on our markets."

J. P. Schmitt, vice president of the Wolverine Supply and Manufacturing Company, makers of toys, said:

"I think the answer to such a campaign is clean cut—we're for it. To get an idea of how much foreign goods are brought

Fume Victims to Go To Grave Together

DENVER, Dec. 28.—(INS.)—Harold L. Crawford, 20, and his sweetheart, Doris Gillian Cool, 19, whose unclad bodies were found in an Aurora, Col., tourist camp cabin, will be buried together in the same cemetery plot, relatives announced today, insisting they had been secretly married.

Carbon monoxide gas caused by incomplete combustion in a gas heater in the cabin was the cause of the deaths, an autopsy revealed.

MRS. JUDD QUITS CELL FOR QUIZ

PHOENIX, Ariz., Dec. 28.—(AP.)—Winnie Ruth Judd, sentenced to hang February 17 for the murder of Agnes Ann Leroi, was called before the Maricopa County grand jury here today. She was brought from her cell in the state penitentiary at Florence. Nothing was divulged as to the reason for her appearance.

A large crowd gathered in the corridors of the Courthouse, recalling the huge throngs that attended her "trunk murder" trial here.

The condemned slayer and her husband, Dr. W. C. Judd, recently announced they would "tell the truth and the whole truth" of her case.

Dr. Judd, who left a government hospital at Prescott to come to Phoenix, said at that time he was going to reveal what he "should have done months ago" and that Mrs. Judd would then stand exonerated and another person would be in a prison cell.

Since his arrival here, however, the husband has not made any public disclosures.

Frank Yee complained that he had already picked a girl of his own race for Yick to marry, and said in effect that mixing races was a bad thing. Magistrate Leo Rothenstein held Yick over for further investigation.

Scientists Upset Hatful Of Superstitions

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Dec. 28.—(AP.)—Eight popular beliefs that are not true were described before the American Association for the Advancement of Science today. And at the same time, Dr. Otis W. Caldwell and Gerhard E. Lunden, of Columbia University, described methods of training school pupils to avoid them. The unfounded beliefs are:

A child is influenced by what its mother sees or thinks before the child is born.

Birth marks are caused by what a mother sees or touches before her child is born.

In former times the average length of human life was much longer than now.

Fat people are always good natured.

Mental disorders are caused by overstudy.

Children of first cousins, though of good parentage, are likely to be feeble minded.

Heavy growth of hair on a person's limbs and chest indicates great physical strength.

'LAME DUCK' ACTION HOPES GONE, SPECIAL SESSION MAPPED

CONGRESSIONAL CHIEFS ADOPT NEW PLANS

Program of Economy, Tariff Reform Being Built

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—Congressional Democrats today moved to build the framework of a program of economic legislation in anticipation of a special session of Congress after March 4.

Mindful the party will assume control of the government in 66 days, the Democratic leaders in both Senate and House disclosed their intention of using the present "lame duck" session for preparatory work.

While efforts will be made to complete some of the legislation before President-elect Roosevelt is inaugurated, there is little expectation that prohibition, farm relief, currency or even tax legislation can be accomplished by that time.

The Democratic program includes drastic economy, balancing of the budget by taxation if necessary, a study of currency expansion, debtor relief, farm relief and removal of international trade barriers through tariff reform.

Senator Harrison, of Mississippi, Democratic leader on the Senate Finance Committee, will introduce a resolution authorizing the committee to make a broad study of the economic situation.

While Democrats disclaim any knowledge of Gov. Roosevelt's ideas on a special session, they expect him to call one.

Speaker John N. Garner expects Gov. Roosevelt to summon Congress about April 1 if the program measures fail in the present session.

Selective Sales Tax Favored by Roosevelt

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 28.—(Universal.)—President-elect Roosevelt is in favor of a selective sales tax, but opposed to a general manufacturers' sales levy, as a means to balance the federal budget.

This was clearly indicated by advisers of the President-elect. They expressed the belief Roosevelt approves a manufacturers' tax on specified products, such as gasoline, tobacco and a few other items, but disapproves any general levy on the ground that it places too much burden on the consumers.

The President-elect has not indicated what tax program he will urge if the federal budget is still out of balance when he enters the White House, as it is expected to be.

BEER BILL LAGS IN SENATE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—(INS.)—Lack of a quorum in the Senate Judiciary Committee today blocked progress on the Collier bill for 3.2 per cent beer by weight and on the proposed Senate substitute to this measure.

An increasing conviction that President Hoover will veto any beer legislation approved during his term of office promised to speed action by the committee next week.

Senator Norris (Rep.), of Nebraska, the committee chairman, announced he will try again Monday to secure a quorum. Virtually the full membership of the Senate will be back in Washington Tuesday, he said.

Closed Session Set For Utility Probers

HARRISBURG, Dec. 28.—(AP.)—The Senate Utility Investigation Committee has been called for a closed meeting here Friday by its chairman, William S. Rial, of Greensburg.

The committee will consider proposed changes in the public utilities law, and pending litigation which restrains the committee from functioning.

Pittsburgher Held As Liquor Runner

WHEELING, W. Va., Dec. 28.—George Brzuch, Pittsburgh, was arrested today by Leroy L. Gates, federal prohibition investigator, at the request of the United States Bureau of Investigation, Pittsburgh. An automobile containing 60 gallons of liquor was found in his possession.

United States Commissioner John W. Kindelberger held him in $5,000 bond.

HOOVER'S SHIP FORGES SOUTH

NEW SMYRNA, Fla., Dec. 28.—(AP.)—The U. S. Sequoia, bearing President Hoover and his party to more southerly fishing grounds, tied up at the municipal dock here today to take on a supply of fresh water.

After two hours the trip was resumed along the inland passageway when an attempt to go out to sea through New Smyrna inlet proved unsuccessful because of the condition of the bar.

The President assembled a small medicine-ball cabinet on the top deck of the U. S. Sequoia this morning, composed of Justice Stone, of the Supreme Court; Senator Austin, of Vermont; Mark Sullivan, writer, and Lawrence Richey and Dr. Joel T. Boone, White House secretary and physician, respectively.

Sedate New Year For Lincoln Seen

LINCOLN, Neb., Dec. 28.—(AP.)—On tiptoe and with sabbatical sedateness, the new year will come to Lincoln.

Mayor Frank Zehrung today explained the city's Sunday "closing" law. Here are some of the pleasures citizens must forego: Dancing, either public or private, fast driving of horses, foot racing, boxing, fishing, discharge of firearms, beating of drums, playing of loud-sounding instruments, and—worst of all—pitching of quoits.

Boy, in Coma 162 Days, Is Thriving

YORK, Dec. 28.—(AP.)—The Christmas holidays mean little to 5-year-old Jay Milton Weirich, of Manchester, R.D. 1, unconscious for 162 days. Injured in a fall on July 17, he has been unable to talk and does not recognize his parents. He is being fed artificially and continues to thrive on the diet despite his condition.

6 MORE FOUND IN DEATH PIT

By LOWELL M. PUCKETT
International News Service.

MOWEAQUA, Ill., Dec. 28.—(INS.)—The Shafer coal mine surrendered six more of its hapless victims today.

Huddled together aboard two man-trip cars, the half dozen lifeless bodies of workers were discovered early this morning deep in the north entry of that pit of death.

The two mules which had hauled these men on their last voyage through the bowels of the earth were also found dead.

Farther back in the north passageway the last eight of the original 54 diggers, who were in the mine when it was wrecked by a double explosion, lay entombed.

Thus, the appalling toll of known dead in the disaster was raised to 46.

PROBE 'SUICIDE' OF CLUBMAN

DETROIT, Dec. 28.—(INS.)—Investigation of the mystery "suicide" of Arthur Morley Kugeman, wealthy young clubman, developed startlingly today.

Kugeman was shot twice in a tiny dressing room of his suburban home. After testing the big Lueger automatic with which he was slain, William Cavers, police ballistics expert, reported today that at least one of the shots must have been fired "elsewhere than in the room."

W. Gomer Krise, chief assistant prosecutor, on whose books the case had been closed as "suicide," immediately ordered a new investigation.

Kugeman, scion of a wealthy New York family, left his wife, the former Julia Buehl, Detroit heiress, in the living room of their home, and a few minutes later was found dead in the little dressing room. The pistol lay beside him, but it was drenched with blood and all fingerprints obliterated. No one in the house heard the shots.

5-Day Week Bill Hearings Slated

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—(AP.)—Chairman Norris, of the Senate Judiciary Committee, today appointed a sub-committee of five members on the Black five-day work week bill and announced that hearings would begin January 6.

GUNMEN SHOOT LABOR GUARD

CHICAGO, Dec. 28.—(AP.)—A guard for the gangster-harrassed milk wagon drivers' union was shot through the hands today as he stood with his arms above his head near the union's heavily fortified headquarters.

Physicians said the victim, Hugh Dunn, 47, would have to undergo amputation of at least one hand. Both hands were shattered by a shotgun blast.

Steve Sumner, aged founder of the union, said that several months ago several well known gangsters threatened him with death unless he placed the union in their hands. The union has 7,000 members and, Sumner said, a reserve fund of more than $100,000.

Since the threat Sumner has ridden in a bullet proof limousine. Walls of the union headquarters have been lined with armor plate and windows protected with bullet proof glass. Machine gunners have guarded the offices.

PROBE 'MURDER' OF MISSING LAWYER

'Boy in Distress' Tells Slaying Story; Auto Found, Body Hunted

HENDERSON, N. C., Dec. 28.—(A.P.)—The mysterious disappearance of R. S. McCoin, Henderson attorney and former state senator, was believed today to have become a murder case and authorities are seeking its solution.

A letter mailed in Chicago by "a boy in distress" and addressed to the "Chief Judge of the North Carolina Supreme Court, Raleigh, N. C.," led to the discovery of McCoin's automobile in a Columbus (O.) garage.

The letter said the writer and three companions, en route from Jacksonville north, ran short of cash near Petersburg, Va., Thursday afternoon, planned to have a slight collision with another automobile and collect damages.

'BEATEN TO DEATH'

Doing so, the letter said, a man in an automobile similar to that of McCoin refused to accede to demands for $15 and was struck with a blackjack. The "boy in distress" said another member of the party struck the motorist, but that they made him sign a confession and that he was writing the letter partly to offset this and partly to clear his conscience.

The letter said the man died in a few minutes, and that they took the body four or five miles off the main highway between Hagerstown, Md., and Uniontown, Pa., where it was buried. He said the clothes were burned.

McCoin, 60, was one of Henderson's best known men. A former state senator, he was a prominent member of the bar and of the State Budget Advisory Commission.

He left home six days ago to visit his farm in Virginia.

HUNT FOR BODY

RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 28.—(AP.)—M. A. and L. S. Sitton, nephews of R. S. McCoin, left here today for Hagerstown, Md., to participate in the search for the body or traces of the clothing of their uncle. Just before leaving they said if his clothes had been burned, as an anonymous letter indicated, it was possible a shrine pin he is known to have worn would be found in the ashes and would establish satisfactory identification.

"That's Willie Whitla, the boy in the papers."

They notified police, but the boy was gone.

Up to the hotel clerk walked the youngster. He said:

"I'm Willie Whitla, I want to see my daddy."

A moment later he was in his father's arms.

HUNT FOR KIDNAPERS

With the boy safely back home, an intensive drive for the kidnapers was begun.

It was not long until officers picked up a trail of a couple spending money recklessly in saloons. Boyle and his wife were arrested, a bitter legal fight was waged, but the jury returned a verdict of guilty and both were sentenced.

At the trial the state contended that Helen was the brains of the plot. Boyle was pictured as being a saloon hanger-on, who had met the vivacious Helen in his travels.

After her parole, Helen returned to Chicago, her former home, and at times has visited Pittsburgh. Her last visit was about five years ago, just before Whitla, then an attorney who had succeeded to the practice of his father, married Sara Eleanore Thorp, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Thorp, of Edgewood.

STIRRED BY LINDY CASE

In addition to his wife and two daughters, Whitla leaves his mother and a sister, the latter of New Castle.

When the Lindbergh baby was kidnaped last March, Whitla was deeply concerned. He remembered the details of his own kidnaping in 1909 and communicated with Col. Lindbergh. He advised payment of any ransom that might be demanded and urged against publicity.

Woman Makes Leap In Third Suicide Try

JEANNETTE, Pa., Dec. 28.—Mrs. Angelina Tangaretti, 52, was believed dying in Westmoreland Hospital from what police said was her third attempt at suicide. Police said she leaped from the third-story window of her home, alighting on a concrete sidewalk.

Mrs. Tangaretti had been suffering from a nervous disorder for a month, police said, and had swallowed poison and pulverized glass in attempts to end her life.

Democrat Contests Election of Beck

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—(INS.)—Notice of contest of the election of Representative James M. Beck (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Republican "wet bloc" and noted constitutional lawyer, was filed with Clerk South Trimble today by John J. Shanahan (Dem.), who is seeking Beck's seat from a Philadelphia district. He charged fraud in the election.

YVONNE HUGHES WIDOWED

Yvonne Hughes, the pretty McKeesport miss who graduated to the front row of the Ziegfeld Follies, is a widow today—widow by suicide.

Her husband, Gordon Godowsky, 26, son of Leopold Godowsky, the noted pianist, was found dead and penniless yesterday in an inexpensive rooming house in New York. In his mouth was a gas hose.

Misfortune thus continued to visit Yvonne.

Godowsky eloped with her from Harvard in 1928 and they separated in 1929.

In October Yvonne, clad in pajamas, was found walking across the Williamsburg Bridge in New York.

Recently her estranged husband had been earning a bare living driving a cab.

Today, at Yvonne's home in North Grandview avenue, McKeesport, her mother said she was touring the west in a vaudeville act.

Sixth Chain Store Holdup Nets $30

P. J. Gracie, manager of a P. H. Butler store, 6100 St. Marie street, experienced the sixth holdup in his store today, when two robbers at the point of guns took $30 from the cash register.

Two women customers in the store at the time were undisturbed. As the bandits made their get away in a waiting automobile, driven by a third member of the bandit group, Gracie discovered the 1932 license plate on the car to read 33173.

A check with the automobile division showed that the number belonged to Eva Marcus, of 640 Chislett street. Mrs. Marcus explained to police the 1933 plates were put on their car Friday, December 23, and that the old ones were left lying on the curb in the 600 block Maryland avenue.

Funeral services were held yesterday afternoon at the Park Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York, the Rev. P. Barnes officiating.

into this country, one simply has to examine the articles on the store counters and see how many are stamped with foreign marks. Every American manufacturer would encourage such a policy."

Christian J. Walter, president of Associated Artists, said:

"I think such a movement is fine, and I'd like to see it include, naturally, the work of American artists. They are equal or superior in craftsmanship to their foreign colleagues. And, of course, much imported art is pure fake. American painters have to live."

Labor Throws Support To 'Buy American' Drive

By KENNETH CLARK
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—Labor threw its wholehearted suppor today behind the "Buy American" campaign.

Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor, said:

"Our people should buy the goods produced by workers of this country. That is the position of organized labor. It will give our people more work."

American workmen are being thrown on the streets by the influx of cheap goods from abroad. The inevitable result, labor officials pointed out, is to depress the standard of living of Americans, and to delay revival of prosperity.

DOAK CO-OPERATES

Pledging his co-operation to the campaign, Secretary of Labor Doak, a railroad brotherhood official, declared:

"I am strongly in favor of every proper means to keep American labor employed at wages which will enable the laborers to live in accordance with the American standard of living.

"Alien gods which can be introduced into this country and sold more cheaply than they can be manufactured here have become the instruments which deprive American labor of its opportunities to work, and of wages to which it is justly entitled.

"There is another alien matter to which I wish to refer and it has nothing to do with material goods. The United States Department of Labor is striving to keep from this country alien workers who would enter into competition with American workers and who would be willing to accept much lower wages than those now paid to our own citizens, native-born and naturalized.

"The immigration service is endeavoring in every way to prevent the illegal entrance of aliens seeking opportunities for work in this country. Moreover it is doing a good work in deporting aliens who are here illegally, and who in seeking means of a livelihood are entering into competition with American labor."

Enthusiastic indorsements also came from S. S. Sandberg, vice chairman of the United States Shipping Board, who said:

"Ship American, sail American. Move your freight in American bottoms and sail on American ships when you go abroad."

Foreign Steel Banned, N. Y. 'Buys American'

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—(Universal.)—New York City, in accordance with a resolution adopted by the Board of Estimate, has started to enforce a ban upon foreign manufactured steel in public building contracts.

Representatives of foreign steel concerns have filed protests with the Board of Estimate, but no step has been taken by the board to abandon its "Buy American" policy. Nor is such action contemplated.

Investigators for the board have found that the port of New York authority is now specifying domestic steel in its contract. State construction departments of Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Maryland, Rhode Island, Vermont and Pennsylvania are doing likewise.

Charles M. Schwab, president of the American Iron and Steel Institute, wrote the following letter to the Board of Estimate prior to its adoption of its "Buy American" policy:

"During the past year there has been a vast amount of dumping of foreign goods, especially steel, into New York from abroad.

"In normal times the volume of imported steel has not been significant, but the attempt to use New York as the dumping ground is reaching proportions which threaten to become very injurious."

Gandhi Gags Lead List Of Year's Best Similes

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—(AP.)—Thanks to Mahatma Gandhi, the 1932 simile crop is lush. Frank J. Wilstach, author of "Wilstach's Dictionary of Similes" and champion simile-gleaner of America, has just made his selection of the best ones of the year.

Gandhi figures in a lot of them, such as:

"Busier than Gandhi slapping at flies."

"Ridiculous as Gandhi in a suit of armor."

"Unimpressed as Gandhi looking at a clothing ad."

Some others were:

"Stocks are bouncing like a sailor on horseback."

"Four per cent beer has no more kick than a bare-footed canary."

William Faulkner breaks into the list with:

"Passionately integral as a college football squad."

Gertrude Atherton speaks of:

"George Moore . . . . with a long, colorless face that looked like a codfish that had been crossed by a satyr."

The Morgans will live in Wales.

JUNGLE SEARCH FOR REDFERN, MISSING FLIER, PROPOSED

BELIEVED WELL IF CAPTIVE OF INDIANS

Noted Explorer Says Life There Is Not Unpleasant

A move to finance a searching expedition for Paul Redfern, airman who disappeared five years ago on an attempted flight from the United States to Rio de Janeiro, was under way today in Para, Brazil, according to an International News Service dispatch to the Sun-Telegraph. Redfern has been rumored to be living with Indians in the jungles of the interior of Brazil.

Organization of the rescue party has been launched by the newspaper "Folhanorte," and men acquainted with the country about the upper reaches of the Amazon River have been invited to participate.

Although authorities are inclined to doubt stories that Redfern is a captive of the Indians, Maj. Thomas Reis, veteran explorer, in an interview in Rio de Janeiro yesterday, declared if the flier is a guest of the Indians he is "living well." Redfern's wife, who is employed as a secretary by the National Supply Company here, thinks it possible her husband is alive.

An authority on Indian life, Maj. Reis is quoted by an Associated Press correspondent saying that if Redfern is with the Indians he is remaining there voluntarily and is enjoying life. He added:

"I knew a Dutch professor who entered the region, stayed 10 years, married twice and had five children."

Reports that Redfern has been found have not been confirmed.

Mrs. Redfern resides at the Fairfax Hotel.

FIREMEN IN CHARRED CORRIDOR IN WHICH J. HENRY BENTON, 60, WAS ASPHYXIATED TODAY AS FLAMES SWEPT UPPER FLOORS OF THE SEVENTH AVENUE

KINARD'S FIRST WIFE SUES

DETROIT, Dec. 29. — (AP.) — Charges that "flattery and promises" were made by Mrs. Gail Stephens Kinard to induce Dr. Kerwin W. Kinard, Kansas City physician, to divorce his wife and marry her are contained in the declaration of Mrs. Ada Lee Porter Kinard's $1,000,000 alienation of affections suit filed today in Circuit Court.

Dr. Kinard was divorced on November 11, and within a few days thereafter he married Mrs. Stephens. They now are on a honeymoon trip in Europe. The first Mrs. Kinard is seeking damages from Dr. Kinard's present wife, heiress to a Michigan lumber fortune.

The first Mrs. Kinard, in the declaration to her suit, said that her husband's married life was happy until in October, 1931, when he went to Detroit from Kansas City to attend a college fraternity convention. He returned, she charged, and told her bluntly that he had met his former sweetheart, that she had won his affection, and asked her to divorce him.

The former wife charged Kinard and Mrs. Stephens carried on a secret courtship, and that they met in St. Louis, Chicago, Milwaukee, Detroit and elsewhere.

MINTER HOME AUCTIONED

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 28.—(INS.)—Under the auctioneer's hammer, Casa de Marguerite, a 40-room $250,000 mansion occupied by Mary Miles Minter when she was at the height of her film career, was sold for $40,000 to satisfy claims of $90,000, a trust company announced today.

The deed to the home, purchased in 1921 by her mother, Mrs. Charlotte Shelby, was held by Miss Minter. A bank bought the structure yesterday while Mrs. Shelby was waiting to testify before the grand jury that Leslie B. Henry, broker, had looted her securities account of nearly $500,000.

HOTEL SWEPT BY FIRE

room. Then firemen came and carried us down five flights of stairs."

An acrobat saved his life by swinging from a fifth floor window sill through an open window on the fourth floor. A few minutes later a second guest duplicated the escape.

Two other guests, a man and woman, formed a rope of bedsheets and slid down 10 feet to the fire escape on an upper floor.

George Hutter, telephone operator, called the rooms of numerous guests and warned them. Patrolman Charles W. Bartsch raced through the corridors on the fourth and fifth floors, rapping on doors to waken the guests.

VICTIM IDENTIFIED

The asphyxiation victim was identified as J. Henry Benton, 60, who had lived in the hotel for eight months. A letter indicated he was an uncle of Charles V. Benton, a member of the New York Stock Exchange and the firm of Correau & Snedeker, of 83 Wall street, New York. The nephew's letter told of inclosing $18 and wishing his uncle a merry Christmas. Another letter from Helen B. Doty, of 49 Shonnard Place, Yonkers, New York, said:

"Hope this tiny bill will fill your pipe once in a while."

Two musicians, James Degman and Walter James, awakened by a third, T. A. Cunningham, of Jack Bruce's Show Boat band, fled down a rear fire escape in pajamas.

CLOUDS OF SMOKE

Great clouds of smoke rolled up from the building while excited guests raced down the steps or fire escapes. Some were led from the building.

Fire Capt. Edward Kerr and Fireman Robert Capes were taken to Mercy Hospital. Kerr's right hand was lacerated and Capes was overcome by smoke. Capt. Gibby Eckerly, overcome by smoke, returned to duty.

The flames, confined to one wing of the fifth floor, were fanned by air entering from an open skylight, firemen reported. Fire Chief Richard L. Smith estimated the damage at $15,000.

In October, 1929, the same hotel was damaged by flames. A 3-year-old boy, playing with matches underneath a bed, was believed responsible.

The hotel property, owned by the B. F. Jones Properties, Inc., is operated by Sam Leff.

2 HELD IN GIRL MURDER

NORWOOD, Mass., Dec. 28.—(AP.)—Ahmeed Orsman, 38, and his friend, Allie Orsman, 50, were held at the Norwood Police Station today as police awaited a medical examiner's report on the death of Anealy Keras, 9.

The child's mutilated body was found buried beneath a woodpile in Ahmeed's cellar late yesterday to bring to a climax a three-day search for her. The Keras family occupied an apartment in the same house as Ahmeed, a widower.

Police at first planned to arraign the men today on charges of murder, but decided to wait until Dr. Arthur S. Hartwell, medical examiner, completed his examination of the body.

The child disappeared Christmas noon. Police, Boy Scouts and volunteers joined in the search for her up until the time yesterday afternoon when a policeman broke into Ahmeed's section of the cellar and found the body, done up in a burlap bag, buried under the wood pile.

Faces Term in Wreck Fatal to Three Girls

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Dec. 28.—(AP.)—Pleading guilty to manslaughter in connection with an automobile wreck in which three girls were killed, Frank Fenton Gardner today faces a term in Huntingdon Reform School. The court instructed that the youth, now 20, be held in the institution until he is 21.

The girls, Mary Layhue, Madelon and Clara Helmick, lost their lives as Gardner's truck, in which they were riding, plunged over an embankment.

'Cowboy in Kilts,' Lauder Marvels At Scot Gift

AMARILLO, Tex., Dec. 28.—(AP.)—"A cowboy in kilts" is the newest role of Sir Harry Lauder. The Scottish comedian left Amarillo today wearing a cowboy hat.

Robert Pryde, president of Amarillo Scottish Society, presented the five-gallon hat, which he described as "the head gear of a race of strong men comparable to the Scot Highlanders." The comedial said:

"This is a rare occasion, when one Scot receives a gift from another—or an American either. It must have required an extensive subscription. But it shows what my people can do when they amalgamate."

Kline and former Supplies Director Bertram L. Succop, charged with malfeasance in office, was given into the hands of the jury today.

The closing arguments for the state and defense were completed before court adjourned last night.

Judge Thomas W. Watson this morning charged the jury.

FIND MAN SLAIN IN BURNED AUTO

ERIE, Dec. 28.—(AP.)—The body of a man found in a burning automobile on a lonely road east of here early today has been tentatively identified as that of Mike Exbicki, 58, of Erie.

Police are working on a theory that the car was set afire after the lone occupant was murdered. License tags on the car were issued to Ezbicki. His watch and chain, identified by his wife, Barbara, were found in the car. The body was burned beyond recognition.

Discovery of the footprints of a woman near the machine added to the mystery.

A boy, who told officers he heard a shot sometime before the car was discovered by a bus driver, Forest Woodward, en route to Erie from Buffalo, N. Y., was questioned by police and Coroner W. G. Stroble.

The Coroner said he was convinced Ezbicki was murdered.

Police said Ezbicki recently served six months in the Allegheny County Workhouse for bootlegging.

Raid on Home Brew Hits Pen's New Year

JOLIET, Ill., Dec. 28.—(AP.)—New Years whoopee is going to be at a low ebb at Joliet Penitentiary for some of the inmates. Guards confiscated eight gallons of home brew made of fermented potatoes and concealed in cans and bottles hung in ventilating shafts.

M. D. WHITMAN DIES IN LEAP

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Malcolm D. Whitman, leader in the textile industry and former national tennis champion, committed suicide today by leaping from his penthouse atop a five-story apartment house in East Sixty-seventh street. Associates told police he had recently suffered a nervous breakdown.

Whitman, son of William Whitman, Boston capitalist, was a member of one of Massachusetts' foremost families. A Harvard graduate and a lawyer, he was a member of the textile firm of Lasher & Whitman, founded by his father.

He held the national singles tennis championship for three years, from 1898 to 1900, and was a member of the first Davis Cup team, which defeated England in 1900. He maintained his interest in the sport and wrote a "History of Tennis."

He is survived by his third wife, the former Lucilla de Vescovi, concert singer. His second wife was Jennie A. Crocker, $10,000,000 California heiress. Their honeymoon was notable for the fact that the bride engaged a private car to bring along her 63 prize-winning dogs and their three kennel attendants. Whitman's first wife was Miss Janet McCook, who died in 1909.

MORGAN PLAYS HANDYMAN ON PIER

Financier Acts as Porter for Eton's Headmaster

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—The rare spectacle of silk-hatted J. P. Morgan playing porter and general handy man was unfolded on the pier where the Majestic docked today.

The seldom-seen financier had come down to meet Eton's head master, white haired Dr. C. A. Alington, and passengers debarking from the giant liner witnessed one of the world's richest men rushing madly around, carrying some of the kindly doctor's luggage himself, and in general throwing his legendary dignity to the winds in his efforts to get his friend through the customs' barrage as quickly as possible.

Some of the more illustrious debarkees who were favored with this unprecedented display were Richard B. Bennet, Prime Minister of Canada, who was returning from a holiday jaunt in England; Sir Newton James Moore, president of the Dominion Coal and Steel Corporation of Canada; Sir Frederick Williams Taylor, vice president of a Canadian bank, and Lady Taylor; Heather Angel, English movie actress, who was Hollywood bound, and Rose Frankel, authoress of "Another Language," who was accompanied by her husband and three sons.

They all had a few words to say about the terrific storm which enveloped the liner on the afternoon of December 23. Huge waves smashed in the deckhouse and killed one sailor.

Dr. Alington, considered one of the world's greatest scholars, is here as the guest of the English speaking union and plans to leave shortly for Philadelphia and Washington.

Guards were waiting at the pier to receive three and a half million pounds sterling of gold bullion which the Majestic brought in her holds.

WIFE OF HEIR GETS DIVORCE

Kathleen Campbell Gregory, 120 North Homewood avenue, was granted a divorce today from Iredell Phipps Gregory, scion of a wealthy Norfolk (Va.) family. Chief charge was that Gregory drank to excess.

One drunken prank cited by the wife at the hearing was Gregory's freeing of all the dogs in Norfolk's pound. No small municipal resentment was occasioned, Mrs. Gregory indicated, by her husband's determined kindness to the dogs.

On another occasion, she said, Gregory pushed his father downstairs. Her husband was drunk about three weeks out of four, Mrs. Gregory told Judge William H. McNaugher. She said she was forced to go to the hospital three times because of his treatment of her while she was ill.

Asks Court Condemn Moose Raid Evidence

United States Attorney Louis E. Graham today asked Federal Judge Nelson McVicar to condemn the contents of a safe seized in a liquor raid on the Moose Lodge in Bentleyville. The safe contained $244, four pints of whisky and six wrist watches, Graham said.

6,200 ATTEND PREMIERE AT RADIO CITY

Notables Marvel at Costly Design of New Music Hall

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Sixty-two hundred New Yorkers and a few out-of-towners preened themselves a bit today.

They felt they had reason, constituting as they did the first night audience at the opening of the "world's largest and costliest theater," the Radio City Music Hall.

It was a rather swank affair. Top hats and evening gowns were de rigeur, despite a persistent drizzle which boded no good for sartorial splendor.

STREETS CROWDED

S. L. Rothafel—"Roxy"—who conceived the idea of the theater, and John D. Rockefeller, Jr., who financed the Radio City project, were in the crowd. And there were celebrities aplenty to satisfy the curious hundreds who jammed the streets around the theater to see the favored 6,200 arrive.

Alfred E. Smith was there, with a brown derby. Gene Tunney arrived. So did Leopold Stokowski, Fannie Hurst, John F. Curry, Sachem of Tammany, Walter P. Chrysler, Mayor-elect John P. O'Brien and Amelia Earhart.

The opening was delayed a few minutes until the audience seated itself with sightseeing. Among the attractions were the world's largest mural, the widest and deepest stage, the tallest chandeliers, and a dozen other "world's biggest or best" theatrical properties. The striking decorations, the lighting system, the stairways, the lounge, the art objects scattered about also came in for close inspection.

MANY STARS ON STAGE

Everyone seemed rather satisfied with it all. And the opening performance, a potpourri of a dozen headliners of stage and radio, drew praise even from "Roxy," who had kept his cohorts rehearsing at top speed, night and day, for the past two weeks.

As the gold curtain fell on the finale, he inquired:

"Isn't that a wow?"

There was no disagreement.

JOHN D. HOLDS GAY YULE FETE

ORMOND, Fla., Dec. 28.—(AP.)—John D. Rockefeller held a belated Christmas party at his winter home here last night and looked on delightedly as a tardy Santa Claus gave bill folds to the men, toys to the children and sewing baskets and other gifts to the women.

It was a gay occasion for 75 friends and the program of carols and religious songs lasted three hours. As it drew to a close, the 93-year-old host said:

"I am grateful to everybody. It is the best party I ever had. I do not have words to express my gratitude for your coming. It is your party and I am glad you enjoyed it. Bless you, bless you all. God be with you until we meet again."

None of Rockefeller's immediate family was present except his cousin, Mrs. Fannie A. Evans.

Weather Conditions.

The low pressure that was centered over the Mississippi delta section yesterday morning is now centered over Northern Georgia. It is causing cloudy weather over most of the states east of the Mississippi and light to heavy rain over the section from the mountains eastward. The heaviest rainfall occurred in Eastern Tennessee, where Knoxville reported 2.34 inches and Chattanooga 2.34. The western low pressure developed into a long trough of lows, extending from Saskatchewan southward to New Mexico. This disturbance produced light snowfall over the mountain states and rising temperatures over the northern plains. The ridge of high pressure separating the eastern and western lows is attended by clear skies over the Mississippi Valley and the eastern plains. It also caused a drop in temperature over that section.

Elinor Fair Elopement Held 'Little Mistake'

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Dec. 28.—(AP.)—Frank Clark, movie stunt flier, added mystery today to the elopement and marriage of Elinor Fair, motion picture actress, and Thomas W. Daniel, former naval flier. The pair was married in Yuma, Ariz., yesterday after a flight from Los Angeles. Clark said:

"Miss Fair and I were to have been married and I still think Miss Fair merely made a little mistake. I know why she did it. I hold her in the highest esteem and believe this will be corrected."

Clark declined to amplify his statement.

Miss Fair, the former wife of William Boyd, film actor, and Daniel announced they would go East to spend their honeymoon and make their home in New York.

After Miss Fair and Daniel returned from Yuma, the flier was taken to a police station to explain why his bank refused payment of a check for $97.50 he gave to pay for the plane to the Arizona town. The bank said he had insufficient funds. Daniel said he was unaware his account was not large enough and made a satisfactory adjustment.

SCHOOL BOARD FACES SUIT ON TAX

The Board of Public Education has definitely closed the way to a school tax reduction in 1933 by reaffirming its 11¾-mill levy.

The action was taken unanimously after the board has considered numerous suggestions for economy submitted by individuals and organizations.

The resolution reaffirming the rate was presented by N. R. Criss. It stated that the Board has been unable to devise any way by which a reduction can be made without incurring a deficit for 1933.

OBJECTORS PRESENT

Representatives of organizations which had sought a lower tax rate, including J. R. Brady of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board's Community Research Bureau and I. Leonard Aronson of the Allegheny County Real Estate Owners' and Taxpayers' League were present when the Board acted.

Aronson, after an argument with Marcus Aaron, president of the board, succeeded in gaining the floor for a short time near the close of the meeting. He declared that the board's prepared statement had not answered the questions of the taxpayers.

Harry Shapiro, of the Taxpayers' League, threatened court action and protest meetings.

Aaron replied:

"We would be glad to have you take it into court."

A meeting of the executive committee of the league has been called for today at which a taxpayers' suit against the board to compel it to use a certain portion of the surplus in the general fund to reduce the burden of the taxpayers will be considered, according to Aronson.

ACTION DEFENDED

A statement defending the action of the school board was read by the secretary.

Teachers' salaries were declared "always too low." However, if receipts fall below estimate, the board agreed to go again to employes to ask their co-operation. The voluntary reduction in salaries taken by the teachers was placed at 15 per cent over a period of two years.

The suggestion of estimating tax collections for next year at 77 per cent instead of 75 per cent, the figure used by the school board, was rejected. The board stated:

"We challenge the proponents of a 77 per cent estimated collections to bring to us a single banker of character or standing in Pittsburgh to tell us that he honestly believes that we will collect over 70 per cent in 1933."

This is in contrast to the city, which is figuring 78.5 per cent collections in 1933. The Citizens' Tax Committee estimated 77.5 per cent collections of city taxes.

The School Board expressed regret that there is no way open to reduce the tax levy and carry on the work of the schools as the law requires. The hope was expressed that improved collections in 1933 may make possible a tax reduction in 1934.

President Aaron announced that the report had been unanimously agreed to by the Board of Education.

AARON UPHOLDS BATCHELOR PAY

The payment of salary to W. C. Batchelor, superintendent of the City Bureau of Recreation, by both the Board of Public Education and the city is defended in letters to City Council from Marcus Aaron, president of the Board of Education, and from the Civic Club of Allegheny.

Aaron's letter said Batchelor's case is not one of double employment, but rather of the division of the cost between city and school board. Aaron approved the present arrangement.

The Civic Club protests the proposed ending of the agreement between the school board and the city regarding the management of the bureau. According to the records, Batchelor receives $3,600 from the city and $3,000 from the school board under an agreement made when he was brought to Pittsburgh in the Magee administration.

TRADE IN SHOES GO TO 'ARMY'

All women's used shoes received by the Petty Shoe Company, Jenkins Arcade, during the company's present sale will be given to the Salvation Army for repair and distribution. The Petty Shoe Company annually holds the sale, making a $2 allowance on each sale of new shoes if an old pair is exchanged.

Learning that the shoe store had requested the Sun-Telegraph to distribute this year's used shoe supply, the Salvation Army asked that shoes be turned over to their industrial home.

Jailed Teller Sued For $10,000 by Girl

Trouble multiplied for Leo Dinneen, bank teller, in the county jail charged with embezzlement. Rose Weygand, 103 Boggston avenue, filed suit for $10,000 against him, for alleged personal injuries suffered in an auto accident on Clairton road, February 11, 1931. She said while a guest of Dinneen, he operated the car in a reckless manner, causing it to overturn.

Dinneen, formerly teller of the Iron and Glass Dollar Savings Bank, recently was charged with embezzling bank funds. Attorney Ben H. Teplitz represents the plaintiff.

Board Defends Failure to Reduce School Tax; Cites Gain in Pupils

'Appeal to Reason' Made in Reply To Critics

The Board of Public Education made this answer to requests for a lower tax rate for 1933. The statement headed, "An Appeal to Reason," follows:

"Opinions of individuals as well as the judgment of the community should be founded on facts. In the last analysis the public school system of the nation will rise or fall to the degree to which clear and logical thinking is developed. An informed public opinion is and will continue to be our greatest national asset.

"Having reference then to the problems immediately at issue, we appeal to the public of Pittsburgh to withhold criticism at least until they have read in full and carefully considered this statement; the board's statement of October 18; the report of the board's committee on finance and administration adopted November 14 and the board's statement of December 21.

"We rest our case on these statements and if there are those who after studying these and previous statements disapprove our action in deciding upon the tax levy, we will be glad to submit to nationally recognized experts on education the educational problems involved and to men in whom we and the public have confidence and who are locally recognized by us and the public generally as experts in business and financial procedure, the business and financial questions involved.

"The whole problem hinges on what is sound educational practice and what is sound business procedure. With our experience and our intimate knowledge of the situation at hand, we do not for one moment doubt the verdict which if desired we will be glad to invite for our future guidance.

"It should be borne in mind that even if further economies could be effected through educational reconstruction such as our critics suggest, these economies could not be effected until the end of the school year, June 30, since our employes are always elected either in May or June for the school year ending June 30 of the following year and are under contract binding upon them and upon us.

"Had we erred in our budget estimates, were it possible even at this late day for us to help alleviate a situation which bears heavily upon many of our fellow citizens, we would not hesitate a moment in proceeding to a reconsideration.

CRISIS POINTED OUT

"On May 17, 1932, long before the beginning of the commendable effort to crystallize the sentiment of the community toward a reduction in waste and through utmost economy in every direction consistent with the necessary service to be rendered in local public administration, and long before the critics and those who are the enemies of the public schools, through a campaign of misrepresentation and threat, taking advantage of the economic situation in which so many good citizens find themselves, began their appeal to the emotions of the distressed, the Board of Public Education, in public meeting assembled, unanimously adopted a minute, a copy of which is attached hereto and made a part of this report."

The minute points out that the school district of Pittsburgh, the city and county governments and similar agencies throughout the state and nation were facing a critically serious situation due to economic conditions.

Real estate here pays 93 per cent of the school district income, it shows, with only 7 per cent coming from the state. Under this burden, real estate is yielding steadily less in taxes, it is stated.

The board announced the curtailment of its 10-year building program and its determination to seek a reduction of salaries in all departments not later than July 1, 1932.

PAY CUT PROPOSED

It was declared that the Legislature, in its session of 1933, should be asked to provide for a temporary reduction of 10 per cent in the minimum salaries for school teachers set up in the Edmonds Act. The board's statement continues:

"Does this statement bear the ear-marks of a board that is indifferent to the suffering and financial difficulties of its constituents? Does the unanimous and cordial response to the appeal of the board to its employes indicate a lack of appreciation on the part of the teachers of the public schools?

"Is there any one so dull or so incapable of understanding figures who does not realize that the voluntary reduction of wage guaranteed by law and protected by contract for the school year July 1, 1932-July 1, 1933, when added to the 10 per cent reduction proposed to be made obligatory by legislative action for the biennium ending July 1, 1935, is equivalent to a 15 per cent reduction if made for the biennium only and if carried to the end of 1935 equivalent to a reduction of 14 per cent for 2½ years? To this our employes are pledged and to carry it out the honor of the school district and our efforts are pledged."

SECRET PACT DENIED

The bpoard then denied any secret agreement with teachers regarding salaries, and repeated its pledge to ask help of the employes again if such a step is necessary to keep the budget balanced. The statement goes on:

"... We, of course, know that conditions and costs of living have changed since 1928 and we admit that teachers and most of our employes have steady positions at a time of unemployment and partial unemployment. They have for the first time in history had a lucky break, but even though misery likes company, we question if anybody would be happier or better off if the teachers, too, were made to join the unemployed or the bread line.

"We may be sure that teachers generally have not lost fortunes through speculation in inflated real estate or in inflated securities as unfortunately many good people have done. Students of economics and the public generally, will agree that teachers' salaries here and elsewhere have been always too low. We tried to make clear at our recent meeting in replying to a request for a 25 per cent reduction in the tax levy, that such reduction could be effected only through an additional 50 per cent cut in teachers' salaries on top of the 10 per cent cut already made.

"We know that some of the petitioners expressed great admiration for the teachers and suggested impossible cuts in other directions. Savings cannot be effected from out of thin air. We do not agree for one moment with the speaker who was outspoken in his demand for a further 20 per cent reduction in teachers' salaries, but we admire his frankness in contrast with the contradictory attitude of some of the others.

"Our appropriations for 1933 are approximately $1,568,000 less than the appropriations for 1932 but the reduction is merely an amount that need not be collected and is not an amount available for distribution among the taxpayers as some of our critics have indicated at our recent meeting.

"The unexpected may happen—our collections may be materially greater than estimated—we doubt it very much. We hope that we are wrong and if the unexpected actually happens it will reflect itself in the next tax levy. Real money and not fictitious estimates of money must be the basis of any tax reduction so far as this board is concerned.' . . .

INCREASES CITED

The statement then comments on the increased number of pupils in the public schools. It is estimated that in 1933, the high and industrial schools will serve twice as many as in 1927.

Part of this increase is laid to the depression. Graduates in 1932 numbered as many as all the graduates from Pittsburgh high schools from 1856 to 1900. The industrial schools have brought increased enrollments, it is stated. The board says:

"We are convinced that it is not in the public interest to modify our curriculum as has been suggested by confining our work to so-called academic training except perhaps, industrial training and the various medical clinics now established and necessary for the physical well being of the pupil as violative of every recognized educational principle. Had our critics studied the matter a little more earnestly they would have found our what we already know, that not a single dollar would be saved thereby but the education of our children would be irretrievably ruined and made substantially worthless."

1922 RECALLED

The board refused to consider using the fire insurance fund or the sinking fund to meet current expenses, and recalled similar action in 1922 which is still being paid for, saying:

"We challenge the proponents of a 77 per cent estimated collection of current tax receipts to bring to us a single banker of character or standing in Pittsburgh to tell us that he honestly believes that we will collect over 70 per cent in 1933. Our budget estimates were based on 75 per cent collection and we would not have dared venture upon this figure had we not had behind us an unexpended balance in the general treasury.

"We refuse to accept the suggested budget presented to us for adoption on October 25 by a group of men who ought to have known better. The budget then presented was based on a 77 per cent collection of current taxes and it included a figure for delinquent taxes erroneously calculated to include a $600,000 item twice, and now we are criticized because we refuse to take such advice seriously.

"We have received various suggestions not specifically referred to herein from various individuals. The petitioners fail to recognize that we are governed by law, and that we could not, if we would, follow their suggestions without violating the law.

"The members of this board have taken an oath to discharge their duties of office with fidelity and this we propose to do. We regret beyond measure that there was no way open to us with the tools at our disposal to reduce the tax levy and at the same time carry on the work of the school as the law very properly requires us to do. We have for years heard much of the advantage of a budget in public administration and lately from one end of the country to the other, still much more of the evils consequent to an unbalanced budget. We submit that worse than no budget at all is a dishonestly constructed budget excessively loaded at either end.

"We propose to consult with the Mayor and City Council and if agreeable to them attempt to secure legislation by the General Assembly looking to greater collection of delinquent taxes in 1933 and also to agree and with them decide upon a more systematic effort in the collection of taxes. These suggestions were made to us by a public spirited citizen at our meeting of November 14.

"If these ideas can be whipped into shape and enacted into law it is possible that collections for 1933 will justify and permit a reduction in the school millage for the ensuing school year. The result of such action can only be measured through experience and not through pious hopes."

'Impossible Cuts' Suggested, Says Statement

CALL 9 IN MINE WAR DEATH

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Dec. 28.—Nine deputy sheriffs convicted of manslaughter in connection with the fatal riots at Arnold City during the mine strike, a year ago, have been summoned to appear in court Tuesday.

The men have been at liberty pending a decision on an appeal for a new trial. There was no intimation of the probable action of Judge Davis W. Henderson in ordering the defendants to appear before him.

The deputies were held for the death of Mike Philipovich, a storekeeper, who was slain as deputies attacked a miners' demonstration.

PINCHOT URGES STATE SCHOOL ECONOMY

HARRISBURG, Dec. 28.—(AP.) — Delegates attending the Pennsylvania State Education Association convention today separated iuto discussion groups to consider matters of specialized interest.

The delegates last night heard Gov. Pinchot, Dr. James N. Rule, superintendent of public instruction, and three of the committee chairmen of the tSate Education Commission urge lower school costs and ask the state's teachers to make them effective.

PINCHOT TALK

Gov. Pinchot said the school economy program "must be patterned to meet the ability of state and local governments to pay their way." He said "The happy medium" must be found between demands for reductions beyond barest essentials or beyond the present status of school costs.

The Governor asserted united effort will give every child his constitutional right to an education.

Dr. Rule said the "school people" must lead the wayt o economical and efficient school administration through adequate legislation.

He urged amendment of the Edmonds teacher salary law to allow temporary reductions in pay and to make optional the annual salary increases, put declared the changes should be authorized only for the present emergency.

ADEQUATE FACILITIES

The basic problem of maintaining adequate school facilities while keeping costs within limits of lower revenues for the next few years was summarized in reports of Dr. J. Linwood Eisenberg, chairman of the State Education Commission's local unit committee; Dr. Leroy A. King, professor of education at the University of Pennsylvania and chairman of the commission's school finance committee, and Dr. Albert Lindsay Rowland, president of Shippensburg State Teachers' College and chairman of the commission's teacher preparation committee.

FATHER ASKS AID TO FIND SON

Mr. Baxter

The father, who said his son contracted tropical fever while stationed in Panama three years ago, could offer no motive for his son's disappearance.

The missing youth was described as about 140 pounds in weight, of light complexion and wearing a dark blue suit, blue overcoat and a soft light hat.

Cipher No. 32 offered today is one for the book.

It appears complicated—but appearances are frequently deceptive.

This type of code is popular with lovers and especially in telegrams, newspaper advertisements, etc., where it is desirable to hide the contents of a private message from the public eye.

There are two methods which may be used in deciphering. These will be "hinted at" tomorrow. Hope you are able to decipher the message today and not need the clues. If so, write and tell the cipher editor.

"Bogie" on Cipher No. 32 is 31 minutes.

You solved Cipher No. 31 by using a letter frequency table and following the code printed today.

The answer was of course:

CUT IN LIGHTING UP TO DRIVERS

3 DIE IN FIRE AT POOR FARM

STANWOOD, Mich., Dec. 28.—(AP.)—Thre aged women inmates were burned to death, a dozen persons received minor burns and cuts, and 30 more fled to safety early today when fire destroyed the Mecosta County Poor Farm Home near here.

The dead were identified tentatively as Lela Wilson, Rosetta Smith and Emma Waldon. Attendants at the poor farm who carried many of the inmates to safety were unable to reach them on the second floor before the fires wept the entire building.

Of the 45 inmates of the institution, at least a dozen received minor injuries as they fled from the blaze which started in the boiler room.

Globe-Trotting

With the Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello Ladies and Gentlemen:

Here's how the Preble avenue ice man who said there was no Santa Claus was foiled. When he reported this to one 5-year-old, the youngster chirped up with: "Is that so? the Globe Trotter didn't say it."

* * *

The Penn Township kiddies are still wild about Mrs. Ross Hasinger's depression Christmas tree, decorated by comic cut-outs and strange ornaments. The young Globe-Trotters are still able to enjoy it on the front porch of her home in Frankstown Estate.

Mrs. Hipkiss of Beltlain street, Carrick, has a similar tree made from a curtain pole with aerial wire wrapped in crepe paper for branches. It is trimmed with string popcorn, tinsel and ornaments.

* * *

This column's suggestion last Saturday about Yuletide decoration using a milk bottle is okay except the milk bottle. Will you transplant yours into a vase or a flower pot and put the bottle out on the porch so I can look the milk dealers of Allegheny County in the eye?

And anyway it's a criminal offense to use the bottle for any other than its original purpose.

* * *

Mrs. H. Pearson, of Hazelwood, has a punctual morning visitor, always on time for his breakfast. It's a blackbird that enjoys the crumbs she puts out for it.

Another robin reported at Mrs. Michael's backyard on Maple avenue.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Barron, Munhall Globe Trotters, were notified by cable yesterday of a Christmas arrival to their daughter, Mrs. Eric Berg, of Stockholm.

* * *

You can't keep talking about beer without mentioning the number of states necessary to ratify a repeal amendment and so to V. H., of Conway, thanks for your question. The answer is 36.

Tech Basketball Coach With Seals

Max Hannum, Carnegie Tech basketball coach, discusses Western Pennsylvania's teams, their prospects for the coming season and the new rules of the game when he appears as guest speaker during the Trained Seals' program on WCAE at 7 o'clock tonight. Harry Keck, sports editor of the Sun-Telegraph, is master of ceremonies.

Mark Shields, political editor of the Sun-Telegraph, analyzes the political situation, both local and national, during his weekly talk from the studio of WCAE tonight at 6 o'clock.

A special program for the children is presented under the direction of Jane A. White, assistant curator of education at Carnegie Museum, at 4:45 on WCAE.

Speaking from the Sun-Telegraph editorial rooms, Louis L. Kaufman, Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News, flashes the latest news to WCAE and WJAS listeners at 9:05 a. m., 12:15 p. m., 2:15 p. m. and 6:30 p. m.

Col. Stoopnagle and Budd, Alice Joy, 'Dream Girl,' In New Radio Programs

Premieres of two new programs featuring Alice Joy, the Rollickers, Col. Stoopnagle and Budd, William O'Neal and Jeanie Lang are listed on KDKA and WJAS tonight.

Radio's "Dream Girl" and the Rollickers are combined, supported by Hugo Mariani's orchestra, in a 30-minute musical revue to be presented three times weekly over NBC networks, including KDKA, beginning tonight at 10 o'clock. The programs, to include almost every type of the lighter music, are scheduled each Monday, Wednesday and Friday at the same hour. As an added highlight, Mariani will reintroduce his symphonic jazz interpretations.

Miss Joy

Stoopnagle and Budd, supported by O'Neal, Miss Lang, a mixed chorus of 20 voices and a large orchestra under the direction of Andre Kostelanetz, return to the air with their original comedy skits over WJAS at 9:30 tonight. In addition, the Colonel and his pal will officiate as masters-of-ceremonies for the presentation, to be broadcast hereafter each Thursday at 9:30 p. m. The program will originate in Carnegie Hall, New York. Miss Lang, you will recall, is the little blues singer who was a Pittsburgh favorite at the Stanley Theater last year.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, speaking over KDKA from Washington, discusses "Money and the Price Level" tonight at 9:30 o'clock.

Program Pointers

Eugene Ormandy, of the Minneapolis Symphony, is guest conductor during the NBC Symphony Concert over WCAE tonight at 9 o'clock. Born in Budapest, Ormandy was a prodigy at the age of 3 and a pupil at the Royal State Academy in Budapest at 5. He has been solo concert master at the Capitol Theater, first violinist as a member of Roxy's Gang and guest conducter with the New York Philharmonic and Philadelphia orchestras. In addition to his duties with the Minneapolis Symphony, he is music direcior at the University of Minnesota.

Mr. Ormandy

"The Black Monocle," a love story with a ludicrously comic climax, is the Five Star Theater presentation on KDKA at 7:30. Charles Brackett, New York attorney-author of the story, makes a brief curtain speech.

Speaking on the topic, "What Fathers Know," Angelo Patri discusses the father's duty in the training of his children on WJAS at 7:45.

"The Mystery of the Tamara Pearl," an adventure in the Ceylon deep in 1885, is dramatized at 8 on KDKA.

Requests for more of the late Bert Williams' minstrel songs prompt Singin' Sam to include the comedy 'minstrel ditty, "The Preacher and the Bear," on his WJAS-at-8:15 program tonight.

Listening In

Romance at WCAE; Phyllis Morton Flies; Radio Time Changes

Marian Salmon, petite WCAE pianist, is displaying a diamond engagement ring—a Christmas gift from WCAE pianist Ralph Federer. During his hurried visit here Monday, Rudy Vallee remembered Dave Rubinoff's mother with flowers . . . Incidentally, Rubinoff is expected to arrive here Monday for a four-day rest at home . . . Phyllis Morton, WCAE'S poet-reader, flew to Miami and back over the Christmas week-end.

Miss Salmon

Complete relaxation has been ordered for Ted Husing, who's been more active during 1932 than ever before. Ted made 25 per cent more news broadcasts this year than in 1931, and officiated at the political conventions before he'd fully convalesced after an operation for appendicitis . . . so now it will be six weeks' rest in the South.

Households accustomed to reckoning the hour by the appointed performances of various radio stars are due for a shakeup—for the new year will bring an almost wholesale shift of programs . . . Kate Smith, beginning January 2, will go on a Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday at 8:30 p. m. schedule; Fu Manchu moves from 8:45 to 8:30 on Mondays beginning January 2; Ruth Etting, effective the same day, will be heard on Mondays and Thursdays at 9; the Smith Brothers will skip from 8:45 p. m., Wednesdays to 8 p. m. Fridays starting this week.

Abe Lyman inaugurates a Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday at 8:45 schedule January 3; Guy Lombardo and Burns and Allen—if Gracie can remember—change their 9 p. m., Wednesday appointment to 9:30 next week; Jack Benny and Ted Weems shift their nickel-back-on-the-bottle show from 8:15 to 8 on Thursdays beginning January 5 . . . and, although they make their debut tonight—a Wednesday—Stoopnagle and Budd will be heard at 9:30 on Thursdays starting next week.

One of the most recent flu victims on the radio roster is Mary Livingston (Mrs. Jack Benny) . . .

Broadcasters found that radio played a part in foiling two robberies around New York last week. A friend of Eddie Cantor's left the movies early Sunday to catch the beginning of Eddie's program and incidentally interrupted a burglar who was trying to break into his apartment . . . and Ward Wilson, a day later, was awakened by the noise of someone tampering with the window. He called the police, an alarm was broadcast and the would-be intruder caught.

Big Hollywood Parties Dull In Opinion of English Social Dictator

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 28.—What's this? Elsa Maxwell, famous English hostess, comes right out and says that Hollywood's exclusive Mayfair Club gives dull parties.

Miss Maxwell, who knows everybody there is to know in Europe, is out here to give RKO pointers on throne-room procedure for Connie Bennett's new picture, "Our Betters."

As one whose entertainments are the talk of London, she speaks with some authority. And she says of the last Mayfair:

Gary Cooper

"To my great surprise, it was an uninteresting party. No one seemed to have a really good time. And there were definite reasons for this. In the first place, at a large ball of this kind, people should never be seated at long tables. There should be no more than six to a table. And the tables should be round, so guests can circulate and so the waiters won't be falling over you.

"In the second place, the music should be absolutely continuous. Those waits between numbers bring a dinner dance to a dead stop."

Briskly and surely, Miss Maxwell made several other criticisms. Then she smiled.

"Where Hollywood really excels," she said, "is in its small parties. They are delightful. Among others, I have dined with Mr. Charles Chaplin, Mr. Gary Cooper, the George Fitzmaurices, the Samuel Goldwyns, the Irving Thalbergs, and I have never spent more pleasant evenings. In their homes, the people of Hollywood entertain charmingly.

"It's just the big parties that are dull."

* * *

They tell it that a very small time vaudeville writer dropped into a chair next to Wilson Mizner at a Hollywood restaurant. Though the fellow was a bare acquaintance, Mizner received him cordially and they fell to talking about authors.

Wilson suggested that Abraham Lincoln had written one of the greatest pieces of world literature.

For a minute, the hack looked puzzled, then he inquired:

"You don't mean that Gettysburg routine, do you?"

* * *

Poor Buddy Rogers! He had to spend Christmas on the train. When the M-G-M contract finally fell through, he got a wire to open in Milwaukee on Friday . . . A certain character actress is going to be annoyed with her publicity man. He sent out a story describing how many Christmas baskets she was giving to the tune line read: "Miss —— is distributing the gifts anonymously." . . . Hardie Albright is sending his wire-haired terrier, "Punch-drunk" all the way to Miami to enter a January dog show. On the same day, Hardie will exhibit another terrier in the Palm Springs show . . . Marion Nixon and Eddie Hillman turned down all invitations for Christmas day, so they could be at home with their newly adopted son. Incidentally, they are still trying to pick a name for him . . . At the homes of Wallace Beery, Frederic March and Barbara Stanwyck, three other adopted youngsters spent Christmas amidst a luxury of which their parents never dreamed. Lupe Velez also bought a carload of presents for the daughter of her sister, who now lives with her.

MUSIC

CARNEGIE LECTURE HALL

PROGRAM

Mozart—Divertimento No. 11 in D Major.
DelBianco—Ninna Nanna, Op. 76.
Grieg ..... Homeward Bound
Sibelius ..... Suite Op. 14
Vivaldi ..... Concerto in A Minor

The third in the series of concerts by our String Symphonic Ensemble was heard in Carnegie Lecture Hall last night by a smaller audience than usual, doubtless due to the holiday season, although the program offered some excellent music.

Mr. Lissfelt

For seasonal music none could be happier than so charming a suite of Mozart. He loved the clarinet, and having had in his day a virtuoso for whom he might write without restraint, Mozart created much delicate music for this instrument. In the D Major Divertimento the clarinet is given full voice; when the players do not permit the horns to crowd out its graceful tunes, it makes this music unusually gay.

DelBianco's own symbolic poem, "Ninna Nanna," is far too pompous music for the subject matter, that is if the composer wishes to be accurately in line with the poem, which we understand as a lullaby. It is far too distended, the many climatic points weaken its unity. Mrs. S. Quisenberry sang the solo part.

Of further interest the program presented a most intriguing suite of Sibelius. It is an early work with just a foretaste of the idioms he subsequently developed. It, too, is obviously program music and has especially in the latter movements real distinction.

J. FRED LISSFELT.

THE GLOBE TROTTER

John D. Rockefeller, 93-year-old oil king and philanthropist, is pictured playing his first game of golf this season on his estate at Ormond Beach, Florida, in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News. Mr. Rockefeller is seen taking a lesson in driving and putting from Miss Virginia Van Wie, national women's golf champion.

Tragic scenes attending the explosion in the coal mine at Moweakqua, Ill., in which 54 miners are believed to have lost their lives, are shown. The Globe Trotter describes the tragedy.

Thrilling fire scenes rarely caught by the camera come from Chicago where two huge grain elevators on the river's edge were destroyed. The fall of one of the burning elevator towers supplies a spectacular sequence.

The heaviest snow fall in years descended upon Snoqualmie Pass, in the Cascade Mountains in Washington. Rotary snow plows are shown opening up the countryside.

The flying Codonas, famous aerial artists, make a huge audience gasp at their daring feats in the Winter Garden in Berlin, Germany. One of the performers fails to catch the outstretched hands of his companion, but he lands safely in the net.

Crippled children in the Metropolitan Hospital on Welfare Island are shown being entertained by performers from Peggy Fears' musical show.

McLaglen Plans Tour In Vaudeville

Victor McLaglen, Fox film star, will appear in vaudeville in a sketch of his own writing. At present McLaglen is at work in "Hot Pepper," the new Flagg-Quirt film with Edmund Lowe and Lupe Velez. The star will begin rehearsals immediately he finishes "Hot Pepper," and expects to be on tour early in the spring of 1933.

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

ABOARD THE S. S. MUSTAPHA II, MARSEILLES BOUND:—This scow is due to hit Marseilles late tonight, and it can't reach port quickly enough to suit me. I've met plenty of daffy people and I've lived under sordid conditions. But this tub will always live in my memory as the goofiest vessel on which I ever traveled. Give a look.

In the first-class portion of the boat—and I can't find any second-class unless it's where the cattle are parked—there are just nine passengers, including my own party. There's a young couple who stopped talking to each other as soon as the boat sailed. I thought it was a romance at first, but I must be wrong. They're simply married, that's all.

Another passenger is a French officer who does nothing all day but look through a pair of binoculars. We're hundreds of miles from land and there isn't anything he can possibly see. Still he keeps looking and looking. The only explanation I can offer is that he once bought a piece of Florida real estate and he's trying to find it now.

Those are three of the passengers. My party makes six. There are two Germans who sit in a corner all the time and do nothing but argue violently about something or other. And there is a tall, thin woman who is unquestionably insane. Harmlessly insane, I suppose, but a pitiful sight to behold.

All through the day, she sits in the tiny barroom and plays ancient phonograph records on a still more ancient machine. There are but eight records, and she plays seven of them continuously throughout the time that the room is open. Every once in so often, she sings with the records. She dances. She is happy. And then, suddenly, she sinks into a corner and moans like a whipped dog.

Maybe it will sound funny to you. It was funny to me for the first few moments, but then it all grew very sad. I don't think I've ever seen anything quite so strange or so unfortunate.

It seemed queer to me that there were eight records and she played but seven. I picked up the eighth one and looked at it. It proved to be an old record by Gus Van and poor Joe Schenck, now dead. All the other discs were in French; this one, of course, was in English. Which is probably why she didn't play it.

I put the record on. The girl watched my every move. I heard Gus's voice; then I heard Joe's. And the fact that Joe has been dead almost two years now made my surroundings just that much more unreal.

Perhaps 20 seconds went by. The girl leaped to her feet with a sudden cry and stopped the record. She grasped another one, wound the machine carefully and began to play it. The Van and Schenck record she buried beneath some papers and books.

She smiled at me. It was a crooked, apologetic, insane sort of smile. Then she sank into her corner and cried bitterly. I left the barroom and I haven't gone back since.

And there you have the passenger list of the S. S. Mustapha II. An unhappy couple; an officer who gazes at nothing; two men who are forever arguing; an American film director who cannot live without his bath; an Italian cameraman who still says nothing but "How!" an insane woman, and a Broadway columnist who is thousands of miles from Broadway . . .

There have been five meals served on this boat so far, and I have eaten one. There is a reason.

When they rang the gong for the first meal, Hellinger was quite hungry. Mr. Cozine wasn't far behind. We washed as best we could, which wasn't very satisfactory, and went down to the dining room.

There we found exactly one table that had been set for 12 people. Whereupon I summoned my Cockney waiter, the only outsider on the boat who understood English.

"What's the idea of this?" I asked him. "Where is my table?"

He seemed highly astonished. He pointed to the large table.

"Why, this his hit, sir," he replied. "Since you hoccupy the cabin de luxe, the captain his 'aving you as is' guest. 'Ere's your place, sir. Right 'ere."

"If the captain is having me as his guest," I said, "whom are all these other spots set for?"

The response was quite prompt.

"Hall the rest of the passengers, sir. They're 'is guests, too."

That was all I had to hear. I couldn't help being on the boat with all those cuckoos, but did I have to dine with them? I nudged the waiter.

"I've got a better dea," I whispered. "You set up another table in a corner for my party and I'll ask the captain to be my guest. He won't accept, and then we'll all be happy."

It took me about 15 minutes to get what I wanted because they all considered my tactics a deliberate insult to the captain. But I couldn't help that. When the captain sat down later and I saw his whiskers get tangled up with the butter, I felt that I had acted very wisely indeed.

The meal finally arrived, and it came in the most amazing routine I have ever witnessed. First came a piece of salami. One tiny piece, mind you, which constituted the first course. Then came the following, served exactly in the order in which I mention them here:

A demi-tasse of soup.
A piece of boiled potato.
A tiny piece of meat.
Quarter of a hard-boiled egg, with sauce.
Another piece of meat.
Two anchovies on a leaf of lettuce.
Another quarter of an egg with different sauce.
Cheese.
A different piece of meat.
Coffee. Fruit. And more cheese.

The portions were extremely small and not too tasty, but I ate just the same. So did my cameraman. But Mr. Cozine refused to go for any of it. I urged him to eat, but he would not do so.

"You were hungry when you came down, Ray," I said. "What is the trouble? The food isn't really so terrible. Once you get accustomed to it, you don't mind it. Have a bite."

He shook his head.

"Can't do it, Mark," he returned, "and I'll tell you what it is. I keep thinking of all the horse meat we saw in Tunis and how the flies were always on top of it. And—well, I just can't eat here."

I almost choked. That was a fine thing to tell a guy when I had already finished my meal. But I flashed him a brave smile.

"Don't talk nonsense, Ray," I chirped. "When they serve horse meat anywhere, they have to tell you what it is. Wait a minute. I will show you."

I summoned the waiter.

"Tell me," I requested hopefully. "Isn't it a law that, whenever horse meat is served anywhere, it must be announced as horse meat? Isn't that correct?"

"Oh, yes, sir," was the reply. "Everywhere—except on boats like this!"

I haven't eaten since. I'm just not hungry, that's all. . . .

PLAYS AND PLAYERS :-:

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Two of the most poupular operetta ever staged, "The Student Prince" and "Blossom Time," will be the New Year's week attraction in the Nixon, opening with "The Student Prince," Monday, January 2, for three nights and one matinee performances. Thursday and throughout the remainder of the week the bill will be "Blossom Time," for the same number of showings. Seats will be on sale in the box office of the Nixon tomorrow. Prominent in the cast of "The Student Prince" will be Gertrude Lang as the barmaid sweetheart of a prince and George Hassell as Lutz, the major domo who nips the romance in the bud. Mr. Hassell has played his role many hundreds of times, and Miss Lang, for a young woman, is quite a veteran, too, in her role of Kathie. Getting back to Mr. Hassell, it is announced that he will play the part of Lutz for the fifteen hundredth time while here, thus getting up among the all-time records in the theater for playing one part. He was the originator of the character on the stage.

* * *

Margaret Anglin, who will be the guest star of the George Sharp Players in the Pitt next week, when the bill will be "The First Mrs. Fraser," in which Miss Anglin will be seen in the part created by Grace George. Miss Anglin first achieved success on the stage in the role of Roxanne in the Richard Mansfield production of "Cyrano de Bergerac." Later she became leading woman of the famous Empire Theater Stock Company in New York, remaining in that position until the close of its existence. For two seasons she was co-starred with Henry Miller in "The Great Divide." After a tour of the world she produced a Greek drama, Sophocles' "Antigone." She also did another Greek play, "Electra," in the open air theater in Berkeley, Cal. There will be a special holiday matinee Monday in the Pitt as well as the regular Thursday and Saturday matinees.

* * *

Ann Greenway, who plays the role of Kit Baker in "Face the Music" in the Nixon, at one time was teamed with Neville Fleeson, a Pittsburgh boy, and was headlined on the Keith vaudeville circuit. She made many friends in Pittsburgh in her visits here with Mr. Fleeson. "Let's have Another Cup of Coffee," "A Roof in Manhattan," "Soft Lights and Sweet Music," are songs in which Miss Greenway's voice is heard in "Face the Music."

Some Parents Will Not Think Of Children as Grown Up

Is it "ungrateful" for kids to want to leave home and try out their own wings—

After Dad and Mom have skimped and sacrificed and "lived just for them?"

Bud's folks think it is, and every time he mentions that he'd like to do it, they put on the Heavy Gloom and the Big Weeps, and tell him all about his "duty" to stay with them.

Nor is that all. Even though he's old enough to vote and pays his own way, they insist on picking his amusements and censoring his friends—and are deeply hurt when he objects.

So what's an up-and-coming young fella to do? Should he stay at home and be bossed?

Or should he walk out, in spite of their moans and accusations?

TREATED LIKE CHILD

My Dear Miss Robinson:

I wonder if you can hand some advice to a very much bewildered young man, who doesn't know quite what to do with a perplexing problem? If you can, I wish you would do it. I certainly need some one else's viewpoint on my affairs.

I will soon be 23 years old. I have been out of college for two years and I have a good job—good for now, that is—and one that will get better as things pick up. I am paying board at home, and so far as I can see, I have ordinary intelligence about managing my own affairs, but my folks don't seem to think so.

I don't care for playing around with a fast bunch, or anything like that; but the way the folks treat me, you'd think I was about 10. They insist on knowing where I go if I step out in the evening. They object to the people I know, although other folks seem to think these people are all right, and they're all honest and hard working.

If I say I like a certain girl, they invariably say they "don't care for her kind." They criticize the fellows I go with, and the shows I go to.

THREATENED TO MOVE

On account of all this I have been thinking of leaving home. I am perfectly able to pay my own way, and if I don't have some freedom to be myself I'm going to go nuts. I have tried objecting to their supervision, and all I get in return is that their feelings are hurt—and they keep right on with it.

I got mad one day and told them that if they wouldn't let me be, and realize that I was grown up and had a right to decide a few things for myself, I would move out. Mother cried, and Dad got very angry, and gave me a long lecture about how much I owed them, and how ungratefully I was acting.

Just how much do you think I owe them? It is true that they have gone without things to give me an education. But on the other hand, I have paid Dad back most of what it cost him to send me to the U., and I intend to pay him all of it.

Am I obligated, especially by the fact that I am an only child, to stay with them, now that I'm grown up and would like—and think I have a right—to "try my own wings?" They seem to think I am; that all their bossing is "purely for my benefit," and that I should "appreciate it" instead of bucking it. I'd like to know what you think. BUD.

NOT OBLIGATED

What do I think?

I think you're just one more victim of Smother Love, son, and you should break loose from it before it gets you down.

Of course Mother and Dad don't realize that. For 23 years you've been their Little Chick, to fuss over and watch and shield and direct. They may talk of their "sacrifices," and of course they made them; but the truth is that they got a big bang out of it all, and now they won't realize you're grown up because they don't want to.

They've been pretty important people in your life, and they don't want to give up that importance—to admit that you've grown up and away from them.

And what'll you do?

Well, I'd pack up and leave. You're not obligated to stay with them. They raised you for life, not for themselves. A mother bird shoves her young ones out in the world; and when human parents haven't the wisdom to do the same, they have to be shown.

Looking Over Old Fashion Book Brings Smiles To Fay King

By FAY KING

What smiles old styles bring! Looking at an old magazine, I was fascinated by the fashions in it.

Bobbed hair was not dreamed of. One saw only heaps of straight or frizzed hair, no smooth marcel waves.

The "merry-widow" sailor with a bolt of veiling over it was the smart thing for automobiling, as there were no closed cars then.

Aviation being in its infancy, the baby bonnet with bows at the sides was the forerunner of the helmet for lady passengers.

Fur coats and fur mittens were worn, too. I suppose a few hundred feet altitude in the open crates then flown was like a polar flight on a cold day.

Stage costumes were elaborate, with hats like merry-go-rounds!

Lillian Finds Valuable Information in Code Message

"Please," I said huskily, as Lillian said Marion had "turned the trick" with her code letter, "won't you tell me what it all means?"

She shot a quick glance at me.

"As I told you," she began, "the salutation 'Dear Momsy,'—spelled with an o—means that she is held a prisoner somewhere and can only address me in code. Then, a little later, she says, 'Momsy, sweetie,' at the end of a sentence. That means that all of the letter and the directions in it are true, that we can depend on them. If 'Momsie sweetie' had been at the beginning of a sentence, it would have meant something else."

She looked at me searchingly, and her next words revived my old conviction that she has psychic powers.

"I don't wonder you're puzzled," she said. "That plea at the end doesn't sound like Marion, and it was evidently put in either at the behest of the kidnapers, or because the girls wished to mislead them.

"Here in the code book is a line saying that anything written after the words 'Good-bye, Momsy,' and signed 'Marian' instead of 'Marion,' is to be taken with reverse meaning. You notice Carolyn's name is misspelled, also, so I think we are justified in assumming that neither girl is 'awful scared.'"

NOTES REPETITIONS

"I can imagine both of them rather reveling in the adventure and its danger, if they were not worried about your reaction and Helena's."

"Which they probably consider they have assuaged now," Lillian said grimly. "But I really am heartened, although I am sure we are dealing with desperate people.

"There are five of them with the girls," she said, "three men and two women."

"How—" I began, but cut the question short as she went on, apparently not hearing my interruption.

"You notice that she uses the word 'nice' five times, close together, making the letter sound like the comments of an English waitress upon the food she is serving. The code Marion devised long ago provides that any word repeated thus, in such manner as to be noticeable, shall denote the number of jailers in her prison. If the first letters of the word were more heavily shaded than the last, men were meant; if the reverse, women. Yes, she might not have remembered, but her shading reads three men and two women, which is plausible—and probable."

"The women are probably as desperate as the men," I said, as she paused and looked at me.

"And more dangerous," she added. "But at least we know how many are there, if we can find the place and storm it. With the trusted men your father and Harry can muster, it ought to be easy to smoke the snakes out, once we've surprised them. Our men will have every possible weapon, from tear gas bombs up and down."

MADGE AMAZED

"But," I asked in a panic, "won't there be danger that the kidnapers will do away with the girls if they are rushed."

"I don't think Marion omitted any bets in that old code I helped her devise to while away her convalescence," Lillian said slowly. "She has a most vivid imagination, and whetted by the case in the newspapers at the time she certainly worked it overtime. For instance 'business' spent incorrectly meant 'furniture heavy; can be used to block door successfully,' and the word 'bad' before 'business' meant 'can lie down out of range of floor and window.'"

I think my face expressed my astonishing admiration, for she suddenly nodded.

"Yes it's as ingenious as it is far-fetched," she said. "You see it's an arbitrary code—had to be, so that no one but the holder of the code book could guess it—and a single word had to mean a great deal. I'll bet you look the book over after awhile, and you'll see that she provided for every possible contingency, and some that were impossible.

"She imagined herself sending for help from a cave, a mountain fastness, a deserted coal mine, a ship, a motor boat, a city flat and numerous other places, and had words for describing each so that I could find her. But how she has remembered them all these years I can't imagine.

"You mean," I asked breathlessly, "that she has told you how to find them?"

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

A Happy Present

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Due to a quarrel, I have not spoken to my sister for some time. As her birthday is coming soon, I would like to know if I should give her a present? M.

Please, please, please do. Think how easy it will be for you to make her happy. Life is so pitifully short to find time in it for such dis-harmony, and this kind of destructive thinking does take so much energy that we might be putting into making people happy. The grand part of it is that all people need in such a circumstance is to receive just a bit of suggestion from the other person that the "cloud is turned to sunshine." Do send your sister a present, and enclose with it a fine, sweet letters of good wishes.

Appropriate Gift

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Would it be proper to present my friend with a suede jacket on his birthday, or would a box of his favorite cigars be more suitable? B.

The "something to smoke" would be more appropriate than the "something to wear."

Contract Bridge

-:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

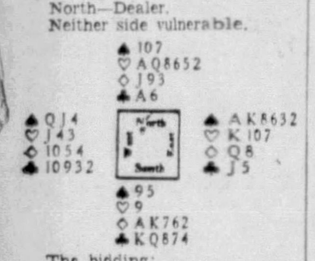
The Margin of Safety

If there are two or more possible methods of playing a hand at Contract Bridge, a player should first use that method which, if it fails of success, still leaves open an alternative line of play. By so doing, the Declarer reserves for himself a chance of making a difficult contract that would be entirely impossible in case his pre-conceived ideas regarding distribution or other factors are faulty.

A vivid illustration of this truth is given in the hand below, which was played quite recently in a New York Bridge club:

North—Dealer.

Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	1 ♠	2 ◇	2 ♠
3 ◇	Pass	5 ◇	Pass
Pass	Pass

While North's Raise to three diamonds on the bidding, as shown, was not strictly conventional, it was probably entirely sound, provided South, his partner, in the play of the hand could visualize every possibility of success.

Against the contract of five diamonds, West opened the spade Queen, which held the trick, and when a spade was continued, East won with the King and decided upon the deceptive lead of the diamond 8 from the Queen-8. South won with the King and led the Ace, which dropped all the adversely held diamonds except the Ten. South now played the hand with an entire lack of appreciation of its possibilities, drawing the last adverse diamond and pinning all upon a break in the club suit. When this failed to materialize, the hand was defeated.

If, instead, at Trick 5, South had played his small heart to the Ace, returned a small heart and ruffed it, then placed Dummy in with the Knave of trumps to play the third round of hearts, he would easily have fulfilled his contract, as the hearts were actually divided 3-3, but even had he not found this division, he would still have had a play for the even division of the club suit, which, by the method adopted, did not materialize, and resulted in the defeat of his contract by a trick.

In playing Bridge, as in many other things, it is quite correct to hope that things will break favorably for you, but it is just as well to provide against an unfavorable break if your holdings and those of the Dummy warrant it.

TODAY'S QUESTION

What is the correct response to an Opening bid of two spades, holding the following hand?

♠ K 9 8 4 ♡ 9 5 3 ◇ K J 8 6 5 3 ♣ —

Answer: Three diamonds. When a Forcing bid is made by either partner, both partners are required to keep the bidding open until a game contract is reached. The lower stages of bidding, should be utilized for exchanging a maximum of information. The spade support can be shown on a subsequent round.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

If the fatted calves are on your mind, get a child's jumping rope and use it. Adipose tissue doesn't like disturbances, it gets up and moves. To reduce large ankles sit on a low stool, one leg over the other; move the upper foot in circles, keeping the ankle rigid.

When the day is cold and misty-moisty, put on the bad weather duds, prance out for a walk. Walk fast enough to make the flesh glow. The complexion will be benefited. Nothing like skin moisture produced by exercise, combined with cold wet air to put the face coating in A-1 condition.

Household Hints

Left-over yolks of eggs are an improvement to soups, sauces and milk puddings.

To avoid discoloration when fresh pears are served with fruit salad, place them for a moment in water, to which a little lemon juice has been added.

Vegetables that are new, such as carrots, potatoes, and so on, will pare easily and without waste if they are rubbed with a coarse cloth. Take care to keep both cloth and vegetables wet by dipping every few seconds in a basin of water.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Hemophilia Continues to Baffle Scientists

Dr. Copeland

"Hemophilia" is the odd name given to a strange disease of the blood. Persons afflicted with it are called "bleeders." In them severe and even fatal hemorrhages may be traced to slight and indeed an almost insignificant injury.

For centuries hemophilia has been recognized as a distinct disease. It afflicts the rich as well as the poor. Many notable figures in history have suffered from it. Some authorities believe the history of the world has been influenced by the occurrence of this disease in certain families. The only son of the Russian czar was a sufferer from hemophilia.

The disease is a strange and fortunately an unusual one. It has been found only in males of the white race. It is hereditary, being transmitted through the maternal side of the family. If one who has this tendency marries a healthy woman, their children may or may not inherit it. If it does occur in the first generation, it will be in the male offspring only. Though the daughters will not have the affliction, they may transmit it to their male children. Once the disease has become established in a family it will persist until that family becomes extinct.

A sufferer from hemophilia is subject to repeated hemorrhages. Prolonged and severe hemorrhage, as I have suggested, may follow as slight an injury as a scratch, push, or fall. The defect is often unexpectedly encountered after the extraction of a tooth, or the removal of tonsils. In such cases the bleeding is excessive and extreme measures are taken to stop it.

In all large hospitals, it is now the practice to conduct a simple test on children before they are operated. This is the so-called "bleeding and coagulation test." It is a reliable means of discovering unsuspected hemophilia. Many dentists make use of its before extracting teeth, particularly in suspected cases.

Since the cause of hemophilia is not known, no means of prevention can be found. But certainly it is essential that in every suspected case, the patient should receive the benefit of the accumulated knowledge.

In former years, little in the way of treatment could be offered. Today, though the disease cannot be cured, life can be guarded and severe hemorrhages prevented.

The danger is great when the victim is unaware of the affliction. All suspected cases of hemophilia should have special blood tests and avoid the dangers attached to the disease.

Within recent years marked progress has been made in the knowledge of this baffling disease. Though treatment is inefficient in most cases, it is hoped that within a short time medical science will discover a more specific and successful cure.

BRIDGE TOURNAMENT OPEN TO ALL SLATED HERE

POLITICS

Mellon Leaves Course Here Open.

By MARK SHIELDS

The presence in Pittsburgh of Ambassador A. W. Mellon for his annual holiday visit home raises the question as to how far, if at all, the head of the Mellon family will interest himself in politics when he returns finally next spring after his retirement from public life.

Mr. Shields

That problem was touched on in an interview with Mr. Mellon Monday, but was not finally answered, and left the way open to any course. Mr. Mellon was asked:

"Do you intend to take part in Republican affairs in Pennsylvania?"

To which he replied:

"Not unless it is necessary. You see, I will be 78 March 24. I do not expect to be very active in political affairs."

Manifestly Mr. Mellon's age precludes participation in the hurly-burly of politics, direct contact with the men and women who make up the machinery of political organizations, whether they be what is popularly termed independent or regular organizations.

That has never been the role of A. W. Mellon, and it is generally felt that a mistake was made when his nephew, W. L. Mellon, involved himself too personally in political affairs, becoming Republican state chairman. He was called upon to umpire the most minor disputes. He held the title of party leader, and his followers refused to deal with a lesser figure. If he had named someone state chairman, and stayed in the background, he might have enjoyed politics more, might have achieved more of the things he aimed for in that line, and might not have suffered the disillusionment and distaste which influenced him to more and more relinquish contact.

Martin Pathway Difficult From First

True, he later did set up a representative in the person of State Chairman Martin, but by that time ructions had developed which made the path of Martin difficult from the first, and which grew in their obstructiveness.

The Mellon financial contributions to political conflicts became more and more slender, and with this scaling down of generosity the Mellon influence dimmed. Money always was the real root of the Mellon political authority, for this family in its more recent years had an unhappy faculty of selecting as its minor political tacticians gentlemen who only made bad matters worse.

In the last national campaign the Mellon flow of money for local political activity practically dried up, and it was weeks after the county committee intended before headquarters could be opened. There was no money for the rent.

On election day the money for watchers is reported to have come from new sources, and not from the Mellon purse in any appreciable degree—if at all.

There may be some significance to A. W. Mellon's qualification that he will not interest himself in Republican affairs "unless it is necessary." The question naturally arises as to what constitutes necessity, and that is something known only to the Ambassador.

"Necessity" in 1930 was the battle of Gov. Pinchot to gain control of party machinery through election of a friendly state chairman after having defeated a divided organization in the primary struggle for the Republican gubernatorial nomination.

W. L. Mellon, having been "neutral" in the mayoralty fight of 1929, having given little tangible assistance to Gen. Francis Shunk Brown in his contest with Pinchot, and having soured somewhat as a result of his abortive attempt to assist Joseph R. Grundy to remain in the Senate, also appeared ready to actually do what he had often said he had done, retire from politics.

Out of Public Life In Mayoralty Primary

Then, according to information from within the Mellon circle, A. W. took the helm, demanded a real fight against Pinchot's reach for party control, had the opposition well organized, and was sufficiently effective to turn against Pinchot Allegheny County State committee votes, though in the succeeding state campaign Mayor Charles H. Kline and Senator James J. Coyne really saved Pinchot from defeat by a Democratic gubernatorial candidate through the majorities they gave Pinchot here in districts they controlled.

Mr. Mellon, it should be borne in mind, has to all intents and purposes been away from home for 12 years. He will return in March with the advent of a Democratic administration.

He will be out of public life at a time when Pittsburgh will be giving serious attention to a mayoralty primary. There is a grand political prize at stake, and many seekers. And, no matter what any of those pursuing the prize may say, despite the fact that there is certain liability to Mellon support unless it has some appreciable counter-acting tangibility, it is doubtful if any would shunt Mr. Mellon's help aside—if it was tangible.

Which means that if Mr. Mellon should again open the check book he would be a most acceptable ally, perhaps not one to swing the balance, but worth having.

There will be "circumstances" galore in 1933. It would be entertaining to see Mr. Mellon participate through their force, if for no other reason than to ascertain with which camp this family, which gave the city Mayor Kline, upheld the authority of the late County Commissioner Armstrong, and had so much to do with making Senator Coyne prominent, would affiliate.

CITY MANAGER PLAN AIDED BY DEMOCRATS

Program Adopted by Legislators at Caucus Here

Allegheny County Democratic legislators in a caucus last night committed themselves to support of legislation which will permit Pittsburgh to adopt the city manager form of government if the voters desire. Representative John J. Kane, who probably will introduce the Pittsburgh city manager bill at the session next week, asked approval of the proposal, and was pledged unanimous support. Pittsburgh Democrats assume they will be given assistance on the bill from other Democratic members, numbering 65 in the 1933 Legislature.

PROGRAM INDORSED

Representative James L. Quinn, of Braddock, chairman of the Allegheny County delegation, reported the program of the Democratic state steering committee, including abolition of all fee offices, modification of the blue laws, repeal of the state dry enforcement act, overhauling of utility laws and greater protection of the ballot, and the entire program was indorsed.

Representative Wilson G. Sarig, of Berks County, will receive Allegheny County support for Speaker. A proposal that the Speaker be deprived of authority to appoint committees, and that this be done by a committee on committees, was approved at last night's caucus. There is a possibility, however, that on this point there may be one or two defections from the local Democratic ranks when the subject comes up for decision in the newly-organized House next Tuesday.

G. O. P. EXPECTS AID

Republican regulars anticipate Democratic support in keeping the reins in the Speaker's hands.

Last night's caucus was held in the office of County Chairman David L. Lawrence, with Joseph F. Guffey, B. B. McGinniss, William H. McNair and Lawrence present, in addition to the legislators. Lawrence will attend the meeting of the state steering committee in Harrisburg Monday afternoon, prior to the state caucus at night.

GUNMAN ROBS WOMAN IN EAST END

Flees After Seizing Purse; Store Held Up

A gunman who leveled a revolver at Mrs. Alice Mechling, of 202 South Graham street and threatened her with death if she did not surrender her purse was being sought by East End police today.

Mrs. Mechling was walking near her home when the armed Negro confronted her with the command:

"Give me your purse or I'll shoot!"

Mrs. Mechling gave the thug the bag, containing $5.50, and he fled.

DESCRIPTIONS TALLY

The description of the gunman tallied with that of one who robbed a woman in front of the Friendship School, Friendship avenue, last Thursday.

Two Negro bandits obtained $462 in the holdup last night of the meat market of G. F. Rohrmann, 607 North Dallas avenue.

The bandit pair ordered Harry Rohrmann, 25, of 1110 Morningside avenue, son of the proprietor, alone in the store, into the cellar, took $67 from the cash register and $395 in a hidden envelope. The envelope had been hidden behind a cheese box, police said.

ICE PLANT HELD UP

Two bandits held up Ted Seelcher in the City Ice and Fuel Company plant, Wylie avenue and Green street, and escaped with $20, late yesterday.

Edward Sinclair, rear of 416 Grove street, was held up by two Negroes at Epiphany and Fullerton streets and robbed of $6.50 last night.

Charles Hogan, of 1118 Progress street, was attacked by two thugs at Progress and Heinz streets last night. The pair, frightened, fled without robbing their victim.

PAY CUT VOTED IN TUBE CITY

An ordinance reducing the pay of McKeesport city employes 25 per cent for the last two weeks in the year was passed by a vote of 3 to 2 at a final reading yesterday.

Two weeks ago the employes had been given back a 25 per cent cut in effect since August, after Council, opposed by Mayor George H. Lysle, had voted the restoration of full pay during December.

The decrease in pay will save the city approximately $5,000.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Dec. 28.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

So "technocracy" wants to do everything by machinery. Well, if they can invent some machine that will kill more people than automobiles why their plan will work. Three hundred and eighty over Christmas, and prohibition not repealed. That's more people than died by pestilence during the same three or four days in all the countries combined where we send doctors to teach 'em how to "be civilized."

Will Rogers

So machinery is just doing fine. If it can't kill you, it will put you out of work. Yours, WILL.

VOLPE RUM CASE BEFORE PARK

District Attorney Andrew T. Park has ordered an investigation into allegations that informations against Joe Volpe and two others, charging liquor law violations, were withdrawn to enable the Borough of Wilmerding to collect fines and costs on the minor charge of keeping a disorderly house.

The complaint was made to Judge Frank P. Patterson yesterday by Constable John Williams, of Wilmerding. Judge Patterson referred Williams to the District Attorney.

The borough has no authority to impose fines in liquor cases and can only hold the defendants for court, it was pointed out by Williams.

Meanwhile, in Oakmont Police Court, Volpe today had been fined $10 after a raid by Oakmont police upon the river cottage of Joseph Tito, of Oakmont, on complaint of neighbors who said a noisy party was in progress. The raid was made on Christmas. Six companions of Volpe, three men and three women, were also fined.

LAUGHS AT IDEA OF AUTO GOOD FOR 50 YEARS

International News Service.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Dec. 28. — Technocracy, the new scientific philosophy of measuring the industrial system in terms of energy, was held up to ridicule by Charles F. Kettering, noted engineer, of Dayton, O., in an address before the American Association for the Advancement of Science today. Kettering said

"We hear a lot about technocracy. The only thing I have to say is that I wish I had some of its sponsors as my competitors in the automotive industry."

Kettering is president and general manager of the General Motors Research Corporation and vice president of the General Motors Corporation. He is the inventor of the Delco ignition system for automobiles.

50-YEAR CAR 'NONSENSE'

The speaker claimed that one of the aims of the Technocrats was to produce an automobile that would be good for 50 years.

He termed this as "nonsensical," asserting that a machine made today to sell at $2,000 would be worthless in 10 years, if never used, because of depreciation in style and model.

"Things deteriorate in proportion as we mentally advance," said Kettering.

Referring to unemployment, the engineer said that America was not a victim of over-production but of under-circulation instead.

"We have been measuring too much in terms of the dollar," said Kettering. "What we should do is think in terms of useful materials—things that will be of value to us in our daily life."

TOO MUCH ATOM STUDY

He declared that science has been concentrating too deeply on the atom and molecule and ignoring the simple fundamental questions such as what makes a motor run and similar problems.

"The less you understand about a subject, the more scientific it is," he said. "We have less knowledge today about the ordinary things of life than ever before."

BACKS 'MACHINE AGE'

Prof. Dugald C. Jackson, of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, a prime factor in the "mechanization" of American industry, had this to say at the symposium on "stabilization of employment:"

"Those who allege the general introduction of machinery has been the cause of unfair, disparate distribution of wealth and over-all instability of employment in this age compared with earlier times have failed to observe all the facts and relationships.

"Observations and figures, in so far as they exist, show that the opposite effects have been operative in America and Western Europe throughout the age of machinery. The accrued advantages have come to families as a whole and therefore to women as well as men.

JOB SHIFT BLAMED

"It is the shifts from occupation to occupation (from industry to industry or from industry to commerce), sometimes forced and cruel, which we must recognize as an objectionable result of invention and machinery.

"Reduction of man-hours by machine-hours therefore should be restrained unless the replacement enlarges net earnings sufficiently to provide a reasonable contribution for re-establishing the displaced employes' status of living."

Wachter, Sr., hailed a passing bakery truck for the quick trip.

LAWYER DENIES BAR CHARGES

Attorney Davis S. Keilly, against whom disbarment proceedings were begun by the Bar Association for employing runners in so-called "ambulance chasing" cases, has filed his answer, denying most of the allegations and requesting that the petitions be dismissed.

Keilly asserted the implication that the solicitation of business by a member of the bar is unprofessional and illegal, is an unwarranted criticism of him and members of the bar generally. He said virtually every member of the bar has sought and solicited the business of friends or acquaintances.

Keilly asserted the Bar Association proceedings did not follow the act of 1919, saying no formal charge of misconduct was made when the association's committee was appointed. He admitted accepting cases brought to him by persons defined as "runners" and paid fees, but asserted they acted independently and were not employed by him.

He said 16 of his cases, cited by the Bar Association as having been obtained by questionable means, were not obtained as charged. Three other cases cited, Keilly said, were unknown to him.

SCIENTISTS AIR HOME 'SECRETS'

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Dec. 28. —(AP.)—The average American family lives in a $5,000 house, has three or four members and one family in three has more than one wage-earner, the American Association for the Advancement of Science was told today.

The average family theoretically contains 3.4 persons, said Prof. William F. Ogburn, of the University of Chicago. More than half of American families live in rented homes and pay an average rent of $27.15 a month, according to latest census figures. One family in every eight lives in a flat or apartment.

There are no children under 10 living at home in 59 per cent of the families and 39 per cent have no children under 21 at home.

Latest figures justify the forecast that one out of every five or six families at present will be broken by divorce, Prof. Ogburn said, but about 30 or 40 per cent of the divorces will form new families out of the wreckage of the old.

NEW PONTIAC 8 EXHIBITED HERE

The new economy straight eight Pontiac appeared today at a special exhibit at the Pontiac retail store, Baum boulevard and Craig street, and at the quarters of Pontiac dealers throughout the district for the first time. The manufacturers claim for the new Pontiac a new low price, marking the first venture of Pontiac into the $600 price class.

The new model is a streamlined car of 115-inch wheelbase and 2,900 pounds. Its motor, a straight eight is said to develop 77 horsepower and 78 miles an hour.

"Skirted" fenders, V-type radiator shell, and "turtle-back" rear are departures from previous body design.

New Tuberculosis Clue Revealed to Scientists

Cornell Man Upsets Old Idea of Weak, Strong Germ Types

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Dec. 28. —(AP.)—A new clue to why tuberculosis is sometimes dangerous and sometimes mild—discovery that the selfsame tuberculosis germ can produce either form of the disease—was announced today before the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

It upsets any idea that one of the two kinds of tuberculosis germs is more dangerous than the other, for it was found that the "weak" or less virulent type of germ can produce "strong" or highly virulent offspring, and that virulent germs can produce the relatively harmless type. The discovery was reported by Prof. Morton C. Kahn, of Cornell Medical College, New York City.

GERM 'DISGUISES'

By getting a single germ "off in a corner," away from its fellows, Prof. Kahn also discovered new secrets of how a tuberculosis germ reproduces and found it takes on four different "disguises" in its life history.

He found that instead of splitting in two halves, which then split again, as some germs do, the tuberculosis germ reproduced by dividing into several small oval pieces. These turned into very tiny granules, and the granules became small, delicate, rod-shaped objects. The rods then grew back to the size and shape of the parent germ.

CONFIRMS OTHER WORK

Prof. Kahn's observance of the complete life history of the tuberculosis germ confirms and ties together the work of other scientists who had seen various stages of its history, but not all in succession.

Another unexplained but possibly important discovery of Prof. Kahn was that at two stages in its life—the tiny granule and rod stages—the tuberculosis germ apparently loses its protective coating wax. This wax coating gives the germ the power to resist action of acids, a quality known as "acid-fastness."

A possible aid to study of cancer, discovery of the organism that apparently plays a leading part in producing cancer in plants, was described by Dr. Michael Levine, of Montefiore Hospital, New York.

The organism he has isolated seems to be what causes cells of a plant to multiply rapidly and produce a tumor. Human cancer results from a similar abnormally fast growth of cells, but the organism that causes it is not known.

Study of how the organism works, said Dr. Levine, may throw some light on the cancer problem in general.

K. C. to Entertain Orphan Children

TRADE ILLS LAID TO MONOPOLY

CINCINNATI, Dec. 28.—(AP.)—The "important role" played by monopoly was blamed today for the "failure of our economic system to get into balance again" by John Ise, professor of economics at the University of Kansas.

In a paper prepared for delivery before the convention of American Economists and Sociologists, Ise explained:

"Steel prices almost at the level of four years ago, with production at 20 per cent; railroad, telephone, gas and electric rates that show almost no adjustment to the new price level."

Coinciding with Prof. Ise's views was a paper prepared by Dr. Abraham Berglund, of the University of Virginia.

SEIZURE LOOMS IN ROAD TIEUP

If the County Commissioners fail in their effort to obtain easements from the Pennsylvania Railroad Company and the Pennsylvania Water Company for the connecting link through the "bottle neck" at Nadine, which is holding up completion of the $3,000,000 Allegheny River boulevard, the Public Service Commission will be asked to grant the county permission to take the land through the right of eminent domain.

To construct a temporary roadway it would be necessary to obtain easement from the railroad company, if not the water firm. On two previous occasions the railroad refused this request, the Commissioners have been informed. The county solicitors have been instructed to ask for the easement and then, if necessary, request a hearing before the commission.

Meanwhile, search is to be made of the land records to trace the old state-owned wagon road which passed through this disputed area many years ago. County officials agreed yesterday that one of the commonies is using the old right of way. Commissioner C. M. Barr referred to the company, which ever it may be, as a "squatter."

ECONOMY BODY ANSWERS VETERANS

The American Legion's attack on the National Economy League at the open forum before the Hungry Club in the Fort Pitt Hotel yesterday brought answers from local leaders attending the luncheon.

Ronald Thompson, chairman of a Legion special committee dealing with the league issue raised against veterans' legislation, was the principal speaker.

Attacks on Thompson's charges were made by the league leaders, including Attorney William R. Scott, national executive committee member; Edward B. Lee, who led in calling the first organization meeting here in the Duquesne Club, and Carlton T. Ketchum, one of the leaders in the second organization meeting in the Keystone Athletic Club.

Thompson charged big business with a leadership in organizing the league. He described the group of executives as being represented in the 42,000 who pay 1 per cent of the national income tax but earn salaries totaling more than the total government income. He said one corporation had placed cards, already filled in, upon desks of employes eligible for membership.

Defending the monies paid veterans, Thompson said:

"The United States pays its veterans less than any other nation according to its corresponding wealth."

Quizzed whether he favored submitting of the question to an impartial research bureau, Thompson expressed willingness if a fair group could be found, adding:

"It might likewise go into income tax refunds at the same time."

COASTER HURT IN CRASH DIES

Edward Schultz, 22, of 412 Chartiers avenue, McKees Rocks, died last night in Ohio Valley Hospital from pneumonia which developed from injuries suffered December 16 in a coasting accident at Chestnut and Lydia streets, Carnegie, the Coroner's office reported.

The victim's sled collided with an automobile according to the report.

Morgue attaches today were endeavoring to establish the identity of a Negro woman, about 50, killed when she stepped into the path of an automobile driven, they said, by E. H. Goldberg, of 1312 Wightman street, in Penn avenue near Murtland avenue last night.

James Heuring, 70, of 20 Meade avenue, Bellevue, was reported in critical condition in St. John's Hospital with fractures of the skull and left leg suffered when he was struck by an automobile at California and Island avenues, last night.

HURT ON VISIT TO INJURED SON

Mrs. Virginia Timpona, 64, of 6508 Deary street, was in St. Francis Hospital today with injuries suffered when the automobile in which she was returning from a visit in Mercy Hospital to her son, Patrolman James Timpona, also an automobile victim, was struck by another car in Bigelow boulevard and Herron avenue, late yesterday.

Another son, Dennis Timpona, a homicide detective, ordered to investigate the accident, learned at the hospital that his mother was one of the victims. She suffered fractured ribs.

Mrs. Timpona's daughter, Mrs. Josephine Carnedale, 41, of 1118½ Paulson avenue; her son, Louis, 23, driver of the car, owned by the homicide detective, and her daughter, Christina, 20, suffered bruises.

Patrolman Timpona was struck by an automobile at Forty-sixth and Butler streets early Sunday while patroling his beat.

Vatican Receives Beatification Notes

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 28.—(AP.)—The congregation of rites has received the papers of diocesan proceedings at Evansville, Ind., for beatification of the venerable Maria Maddalena Bentivoglio, founder of the Poor Claire Sisters in the United States. She was born in Rome in 1834, the daughter of a general in the Neapolitan Army, who later became Governor of Rome.

Sharon Mill to Give Employment to 200

SHARON, Pa., Dec. 28.—More than 200 men will be given employment when the Mercer Tube and Manufacturing Company opens operations at its plant here on January 5. The company recently took over the American Steel Foundries Company plant. D. F. H. McDowell, of Pittsburgh, is president.

M'ARDLE FEARS WEIGHT CHEAT

The adage "'Tis better to give than to receive" is recalled by the comments of at least one City Councilman on the offer of the County Commissioners to take over the Bureau of Weights and Measures.

Councilman P. J. McArdle said:

"I wouldn't want to decide it merely on the basis of cost of operating this function of city government. I would want to be satisfied that the county's operation within city limits would be equal to that which the city's forces have been doing. It will be of no profit to the city taxpayers to have saved the cost of operating the weights and measures division if, as a result, the way is opened for the taxpayers to be robbed by some vendors of merchandise through short weights and measures."

COX CONTINUES 'CARD' APPEAL

Father Cox was so successful in his drive for Sun-Telegraph subscriptions, in which the blanks for this purpose were given or mailed to him in the place of Christmas cards, that he has extended the drive as a New Years aid.

Speaking on the radio Sunday morning over WJAS he told how he and his assistants had given out 10,000 baskets of food to the needy up to 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon. At that hour his funds and his supplies ran out, and many were still waiting for their Christmas dinner. Just as he abandoned hope another liberal check came to him by special messenger from the Sun-Telegraph with an additional donation in cash from a group of firemen of Pittsburgh. With these two donations he was able to take care of every one who asked for aid the day before Christmas.

KEPHART, HURT IN CRASH, DIES

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., Dec. 28.—Attorney John P. Kephart, Philadelphia attorney, son of former State Treasurer H. M. Kephart and a nephew of Supreme Court Justice John W. Kephart, died today in Frantz Hospital, Confluence, of injuries suffered Sunday night in an automobile accident.

Kephart and his wife were en route to Connellsville from Addison, where they had called on relatives to eat Christmas dinner with Mrs. J. M. Reid, mother of Mrs. Kephart.

Both passengers were hurled through the top and Kephart was tossed over parked automobiles. Mrs. Kephart was injured slightly and is at the home of her mother here.

MAN, WOMAN KILL SELVES

Despondency over unemployment and ill health led a man and woman to take their lives by leaping from a bridge and hanging last night and early today, according to a Coroner's report.

The body of Mrs. Augusta Campbell, 27, of 4217 Windsor street, was found hanging in a closet at her home early today. Relatives said she had been despondent because of ill health.

Donald Roper, 27, Negro, of 537 Monroe avenue, Bellevue, plunged to his death from Gilliland's Bridge, Ohio River boulevard, Bellevue, shortly before last midnight. He left a note saying he was "tired of unemployment," morgue officials said.

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh's Society Happenings

In Mayfair
—With—
Patricia Pitt

This season's informal parties are every bit as gay as the gala balls of former years. But Christmas gaieties, whether large or small, assume a vivacious, festive not always. Last night the H. Fred Mercers gave a dinner party in their home for their daughter, Marjorie, a graduate of Briarcliff; their son, H. Fred Mercer, Jr., who is a junior at Williams College, and his classmate, James P. Rich, of New York, who is the Mercers' house guest.

Gaily bedecked Christmas trees formed the major part of the decorations, with red and silver ornaments, and red and silver repeated in the other decorations. And Marjorie chose red and silver for her gown.

The Robert L. Clauses, too, gave a dinner in their home last night prior to the sub-deb dance at the Edgeworth Club, for their daughter, Nancy and Elizabeth Boyd and Sally Odell, all students at Miss Madeira's School. And Nancy wore gold cloth banded with Kolinsky.

Debutante Bows

Another bud made her bow last night, Georgianna Collin, daughter of the junior W. W. Collins, of Sewickley, at a dance in the Allegheny Country Club.

* * *

Christmas decorations were used and the debutante, receiving with her mother and father, wore ivory crepe embroidered in gold and her flowers were Talisman roses and white lilacs. Her mother chose plum colored velvet and her sister, Katherine, wore white crepe with touches of black. And Katherine's engagement to Robert R. Forrester, Jr., son of Mrs. H. A. Wilson, of Park avenue, New York, and Robert R. Forrester, of New York, was announced at a dinner prior to the debutante party, given by the George Hubbard Clapps, grandparents of Katherine, in their Edgeworth home.

Tonight brings the coming out party of Nancy Lee Myers, who makes her bow at a dance given by her parents, the J. Frederic Byerses, in the Allegheny Country Club.

Gowns Striking At Southern Club Ball

MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

Another Southern Club ball has passed into history and very pleasant history, too, like all its many predecessors. It was held last night at the Hotel Schenley with about 400 persons attending. It was a beautiful affair from both sartorial and decorative standpoints. The decorations, like the gowning, were simple but particularly effective. The chief feature was a shapely Christmas tree laden with silver tinsel and silver balloons. And there were festoons of Christmas greens everywhere.

White seemed to be the favored choice in the gowns. One of the most striking and yet one of the simplest was of white crepe and crystal worn by Mrs. Stanley Crawford, chairman of the ball. Miss Grey Powell, among the aides, wore white also, a sash of deep red draping its graceful way from the right shoulder across the back to the left side where it fell to the hem. Mrs. Charles M. White wore white, too, her gown being studded with tiny rhinestones. Mrs. H. D. Stark's gown was of white with touches of red; Mrs. James McFall, a former president of the club, wore white satin with bands of fur for trimming. Nancy Metcalfe's striking frock was of white satin with the fluted sleeve lines now so much in vogue, of violet maline. White wool lace was worn by Marian Black. Wool, too, was chosen by Mrs. Walter F. Irvin, but it was black and was combined with white organdy. Two other aides, Carolyn Pierce and Evelyn Bitner, were in white, Carolyn's gown being trimmed with silver sequins and Evelyn's with crystal beads.

Mrs. George H. Deike wore blue velvet, her daughter-in-law, the junior Mrs. George Deike, was charming in white, and Helen Ruth Deike had on an especially charming gown of pale blue and crystal. One of the most attractive gowns seen was that worn by Mrs. Otto G. Richter. It was of rich red velvet, made with a high waistline and with wide bows at the shoulders. With it she wore shirred red velvet gloves. Mrs. J. Audley Pierce was in white with a touch of red at the left shoulder. Mrs. William O'Lee wore black lace as did Mrs. Newell G. Alford. Mrs. John A. Steel and Mrs. Adolph Hofmann. Mrs. John William Rese's gown was a flame colored crepe with silver trimming. Her niece, Jacqueline Alvey, who is here from Baltimore over the holidays, had on a charming creation of dawn crepe with handmade flowers of pale blue marking the waist line.

Mrs. Harold H. March, a new member of the club, wore an effective combination in her gown of pale blue satin and coral velvet cape. Janet Spaugh's gown was of gold cloth. Mrs. John L. Perry wore hyacinth blue with crystal trimming; Mrs. Robert F. Metcalfe wore gray chiffon; Mrs. R. M. Entwisle was in pale blue satin. Mrs. J. Roy Dickie in red and flesh, rhinestone trimmed, and Mrs. Arthur Lynn in beige lace.

Nancy Metcalfe and Karl Heinrich, in rhinestone velvet masks and old-fashioned Southern costumes, did a specialty dance and led the Virginia reel which was danced by the young aides. A number of tables were set up for cards.

RETURN TO CLASSIC STYLES SHOWN BY RETURN OF BEIGE

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Dec. 28 — One of the surprises of the advance spring fashion collections just launched in Paris is the quantity of beige used by all important designers. Happily for the majority of women, it is an indication to the return of classic styles. The designers themselves, as well as the women they dress, are apparently fed up with the brilliant odd colors of the past few seasons and are returning to the old reliables—the colors which, after all, make them look their best.

* * *

THE NEW beige that Paris uses for 1933 is a handsome color. It has none of the weak-kneed listlessness of the beige which American women were formerly obliged to wear whenever they wanted some easy-to-wear light color. Probably its good looks may be largely credited to the fact that it is really not a true beige at all, but has plenty of gray and plenty of good, sturdy brown in its make-up. It is a tone that is becoming to even the sallowest skin.

* * *

ONE OF the beauties of this new color is its adaptableness to slight changes in its own tone. More than one designer uses, in a single costume, two, three or even four different beiges—some warmly light, some dark and cold. This combining of different tones of the same color gives an unexpected life and vitality to a costume.

* * *

MOLYNEUX GETS this effect by the most delicate shading in his colors. In the coat-and-dress costume sketched, the basket-weave woolen of the coat is only slightly darker and grayer beige than the marocain of the dress and the color of the dress is just a tint darker than the crepe de chine of its collar. The color of the fox scarf-collar on the coat seems, strangely enough, to match them all.

* * *

THE MOLYNEUX hat is also in beige—a felt affair that just covers the crown of the head, and which has a tiny brim of folds of its own felt, caught in a bow at the back.

FIELDING MARKS OFTEN MEAN LITTLE

NOTHING ELSE IN connection with baseball statistics is so inconsequential as the table published today setting forth the National League fielding averages. It has been remarked that always there have been fielding records and always there will be, but there never has been a time in baseball when a fielding record was used by any one experienced in the diamond sport to judge a player's value.

Floyd Vaughan

Here and there you'll find a real star hold the leadership at his position, but more frequently the best men are comparatively low on the list. Often the figures are misleading. A man may be the leader at his job in the averages only because he has shirked hard chances, or has lacked the speed to reach many a ball on which he might have erred. Another man is lower on the list because he has not feared to go after everything. Floyd Vaughan, for instance, made more errors than any other shortstop in the National League, yet who would think of trading him for the boys with higher averages? Fielding records may be a necessary part of the game, but in many cases they don't mean a thing.

HARRY DAVIS, for many years first baseman of the A's, and a Pirate back in the '90's when Connie Mack, then manager here, got him from the Giants in a trade for Jake Beckley, agrees with Jack Doyle and other old-timers that baseball has become too soft.

"Last season," Davis told Bill Dooly, "I heard a player on a visiting club in Philadelphia say to one of the A's before a game: 'Say, if I hit one pretty good, don't break your neck going after it, will you?' He was probably working on a bonus for hitting .300 and needed every hit he could get. The players are too friendly. The boys used to spend the last minutes before a game filing their spikes. Now they spend them filing their nails."

YOU DON'T HAVE to look over the official pitching averages of the American League for 1932 very long to see the answer to the question as to whether the pitchers make the Yankees or the Yankees make the pitchers. Clearly, it's the power of the McCarthy bats that brings home many of the New York victories.

Of course, the Yank hurlers rank high on the list in percentage of games won. The slabmen on a club that wins 107 games and loses only 47 must necessarily be well up front in that respect.

BUT THAT IT was the swatting of Ruth, Gehrig, Lazzeri and the other bombers, rather than any extraordinary work on the part of the pitchers, that won the pennant for the Yankees, just as was the case in the world series, is shown by a comparison of the records made by the New York chuckers in percentage of victories and in average of earned runs allowed. The latter is the real gauge of a pitcher's worth. Only Ruffing finished high in both respects. Only Ruffing and Allen allowed an average of less than four earned runs. Ruffing was third in winning percentage and second in effectiveness. Though first in winning percentage, Allen ranked ninth in effectiveness. Gomez was second among the league's regular twirlers in winning percentage, but twenty-third in effectiveness. Brown was tied with Grove for fifth ranking in winning percentage, but was No. 32 on the list in effectiveness. Pipgras was ninth in winning percentage, but twenty-second in effectiveness. Pennock was eighth in winning percentage, but thirty-seventh in effectiveness.

Waite Hoyt

SHOWING THAT IT doesn't require great pitching to win for the New York maulers, these records bear out two wise cracks made by Waite Hoyt back in 1927. "The secret of success as a pitcher lies in getting a job with the Yankees," he said. And he added: "No Yankee pitcher ever should hold out. If he does, they may trade him, and then he'll have to pitch against them."

The Yankees may not be able to make an inferior pitcher, but they can make it very easy for an ordinarily good pitcher not only to win, but to look great in doing so. He can enter the box with more confidence than he would have working for any other club, and he doesn't always have to strain himself to win. The Yanks will score enough runs generally to make it easy for him. Last season they averaged six and a half runs to a game and were the only team in either of the big leagues to reach the thousand mark in tallies for the year.

WITH MAX SCHMELING and Max Baer matched to fight at a New York show which Jack Dempsey will promote next June, the Madison Square Garden Corporation, having Jack Sharkey under contract for a title bout before June 30, will have to pick an opponent for Sharkey from among the less attractive heavyweights.

Dempsey believes he has all the better of it, and predicts the Schmeling-Baer match will draw much more than a championship number between Sharkey and one of the lesser lights. He estimates his gate at $500,000.

FREDDIE LINDSTROM gets a laugh out of statements published in New York that the Giants have acquired a younger outfielder in George Davis to take Freddie's place "He's two years older than I am, and I'm 27 now," Lindstrom snickered. "But I'm satisfied, if everybody else is. And I got a letter from the Pirate management expressing delight over the trade. So I can't kick. I don't know how Davis will go in New York. I rather think he'll miss that short right-field fence in Philly—that wasn't included in the deal, you know."

AS IN HIS own case, in shifting from New York to Pittsburgh, Lindstrom thinks the transfer from St. Louis to Cincinnati will improve the playing of Jim Bottomley. "I was glad to see Bottomley go to the Reds," he said. "That's a break for Jim.

"You know, sometimes you get in a rut in one city and a little change will help. Bottomley will help the Reds, too, or I'll miss my guess, and Cincinnati may go some place under Donie Bush. He's a great manager."

YALE'S NEW FOOTBALL coach will have no easy task ahead of him in trying to develop a winning team in his first year. Most of last year's regulars were seniors and there will be only a small nucleus of experienced players left.

Earle Sande

In one respect, however, that may not be a disadvantage, since one of the most difficult problems confronting an incoming coach is trying to teach new methods to a group of veteran gridders. The new mentor can start from the bottom and his material will not have so many fixed ideas to be changed.

WHILE SO MUCH space is being devoted to the doings of Johnny Gilbert and Hank Mills in the fight for the year's jockey honors, it must be remembered that their big winning totals are made up almost entirely of victories in ordinary races. Nobody has yet loomed up to threaten the high marks set by Earl Sande in stake events. During his career, Sande won 149 stake races, riding 67 horses in doing it. The combined first-money value of these races was $1,699,416.

MENTORS PLAN TO SUGGEST CHANGES

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—(INS.)—The American Football Coaches' Association today adopted a resolution suggested by Lou Little, of Columbia, to appoint a committee of 20 coaches to study rules and make recommendations that will be passed on to the rules committee.

Previously Little advocated a motion to give the coaches direct voting power on the rules committee, but today entered the alternative resolution that was accepted.

The coaches' rules board will be composed of 15 college coaches now active members in the association and five high school coaches. This board will study the rules and offer suggestions to a committee of three making up the coaches' advisory board, which in turn will present the findings to the rules committee.

WANT RECOGNITION

Little said that voting power on the rules board was not important so long as that body weighed the findings of the coaches.

Although no vote was taken it was the sentiment of the coaches gathered here today that the next annual meeting will be held in Chicago. All previous gatherings met in New York.

The coaches then adjourned for lunch and will meet again this afternoon when the election of officers will take place.

It seems to be the sentiment of the coaches, incidentally, that William S. Langford, of New York, for years secretary of the National Football Rules Committee, be chosen to take the chairmanship, vacated by the death this year of Edward K. Hall, of Dartmouth. Langford's place as secretary, in that event, may go to Walter R. Okeson, of Lehigh, at present the commissioner of the Eastern Intercollegiate Association.

O'BRIEN RAPS CHEATING

After listening to a report by Maj. Ralph I. Sasse, of the Army, on officiating, in which he urged less hesitation in calling fouls for piling on, clipping and starting before the ball, together with a recommendation for development of younger officials, the association heard a ringing appeal against so-called "cheating," delivered by Dr. Edward J. O'Brien, of Boston, veteran referee.

Dr. O'Brien, after tracing improvement in officiating under more efficient organization and the elimination of much of the former "favoritism" in selecting officials, nevertheless urged the coaches to stamp out all attempts at teaching players to evade the rules.

THREE PANTHER STARS HURT IN SCRIMMAGE

TUCSON, Ariz., Dec. 28.—While both Pitt and Southern California football teams are making it hard for the Coast scribes to find something to write about, by refusing to report any cases of flu or any sprained ankles, Jock Sutherland, of Pitt, has relented somewhat and is talking vaguely about a possible shift in the Pitt backfield.

The Panthers will start tapering off drills today, with the rough work finished. Signal sessions and dummy scrimmages will be the order of each practice from now on.

MAY SHIFT BACKS

Until Monday it was thought that the Panther lineup was all set and that Jock would depend upon his regular combination of Bob Hogan at quarter; Warren Heller and Mike Sebastian at the halves and Izzy Weinstock at fullback.

On Monday, however, he used Dick Matesic at Sebastian's right halfback post and Heinie Weisenbaugh at fullback. Both of these reserves went well in the scrimmage session. Since then they have seen as much service with the varsity as either of the others.

It will be remembered that in 1930, it was little Jimmy Clark, substitute fullback, who did most of the groundgaining for the Panthers. Weisenbaugh, except for a few more pounds, is Clark's double in a football suit.

The Panthers had their final scrimmage in preparation for the Rose Bowl game yesterday and it was a honey. After the smoke of battle had settled, three Panther regulars, All-America Warren Heller and Mike Sebastian, halfbacks, and Paul Cuba, star tackle, were among the casualties. Cuba suffered a leg injury and was the most seriously hurt of the three.

Joe Tormey, veteran center, was the star of the action, playing a whirlwind defensive game. Coach Sutherland ordered running plays exclusively for the offensives, and in lugging the ball, Fullback Weinstock and Heinie Weisenbaugh, shone with great brilliance. The strength and power displayed by the Pitt second team won the applause of Coach Jock.

TROJANS STRESS ATTACK

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 28.—(AP)—Possibility that Southern California might present a more powerful running attack against Pitt January 2 than at any point in the regular schedule, has been strengthened as Coach Howard Jones has stressed offensive work outs.

Unlike other years, the Trojans played a defensive game for the most part this season, awaiting a making the break which took them to nine consecutive victories.

A strong line and a green backfield were the factors which made this necessary but with the backfield carriers in possession of more experience now, Coach Jones may put more of the responsibility of the game on their shoulders.

There was an indication of the Trojan power of yesteryears in the Notre Dame game when Southern California drove from the 20-yard line to its second touchdown. Gordon Clark and Homer Griffith, two big boys, Coach Jones has found the hard-hitting backs he was looking for earlier in the year.

HAS GOOD BLOCKERS

Then he plucked a couple of stalwarts from the line in Bill Erskine, a tackle, and Kenneth Bright, a center, and put them in the halfback posts to do the blocking. The season was well advanced when this work was completed and the game against the Ramblers was the first real test of their ability to generate power.

It is a fact that Coach Jones has been working on his running attack perhaps more than passes on offense, changing assignments around a bit for the benefit of the ball carriers.

ROOT REPORTED YALE COACH

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—(AP.)—Well-founded reports were current at the Football Coaches' Association meeting today that Reginald Root had been definitely selected as head football coach of Yale, with Dr. Marvin A. (Mal) Stevens, who resigned from that post a few years ago, continuing his connection with Blue athletics in an advisory capacity.

The formal announcement is expected from New Haven tomorrow.

The report said the remainder of the staff would consist of Adam Walsh, as line coach; Bucky O'Connor, as backfield coach, and Charles Comerford, as end coach. All four men were on the 1932 staff, Root as freshman mentor.

Schmeling Rated Leading Heavy By Scribes

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—(AP.)—The annual consensus of the New York Sun, based on the votes of 60 boxing writers, gives first place in the heavyweight ranks to Max Schmeling, of Germany, for the third straight year, despite the fact that the "Black Uhlan" lost his world championship to Jack Sharkey during the past summer.

Schmeling was voted the best of the heavyweights by 38 writers, while only 18 thought that Sharkey's disputed 15-round decision over the German in June entitled him to top-ranking.

Here is how they were ranked in the consensus:

1, Max Schmeling; 2, Jack Sharkey; 3, Max Baer; 4, Stanley Poreda; 5, Primo Carnera; 6, Johnny Risko; 7, King Levinsky; 8, Mickey Walker; 9, Young Stribling; 10, Ernie Schaaf. Honorable mention—Tommy Laughran, Larry Gains, Steve Hamas, Unknown Winston, Charley Retzlaff, Lee Ramage, Paulino Uzcudun, Tuffy Griffith, Arthur Huttick.

DUKES TO PLAY DETROIT U.

One more ball game and the Dukes will have their 1933 football schedule all ready to wrap up and lay away in the old moth balls.

Last night, Graduate Manager John D. Holohan announced that Gus Dorias' tough Detroit University Titans would be met by the locals at Forbes Field in a night game next October 20. The game is the ninth to be arranged by the Night Riders, and once they get the November 25 date filled, they'll be set.

Detroit has not appeared here since 1927, when it beat Carnegie Tech. The Titans annually rank with the strong elevens of the Midwest and must be listed with the most major of the major opponents on the Duquesne card.

To date, the Dukes have carded Waynesburg, West Virginia Wesleyan, West Virginia, Bucknell, Western Maryland, Detroit, Washington-Jeff, Pitt and Geneva.

Coach Chick Davies has his Dukes of the basketball court hard at work for their inaugural tilt with Adrian College here Friday night.

D.-E. Five Wins Over San Jose

SAN JOSE, Cal., Dec. 28.—(AP.)—The barnstorming Davis and Elkins basketball team triumphed over San Jose State College, 37 to 32, here last night.

Leading at the intermission, 21 to 17, the visitors stretched it into a 10-point lead, but the San Joseans rallied with shots by Tuler, Mathiessen and later Rae to narrow the margin once more. Vest, Davis and Elkins forward, led the scoring with 15 points.

AL WITTMER ILL

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 28.—Al Wittmer, former Princeton football star and coach, is reported convalescing in a sanitarium from a nervous breakdown. He has been ill for a year and recently was removed to the hospital. He came to Princeton from Pittsburgh and has a law office at Princeton, N. J.

BABE IN CINCINNATI

CINCINNATI, Dec. 28.—(INS.)—With nothing but slightly chilled words in reply to questions about the A. A. U. and its "peace offering" of re-instatement, Mildred (Babe) Didrickson, the one-woman track team, arrived in Cincinati today en route to New York.

SPORT VIGNETTES

Bright idea to start off the day: . . . Why not rematch Gorilla Jones and Tommy Freeman for New Years Night? . . . Mose Butch was introduced at the Garden as a challenger of any bantamweight in the world . . . Almost time he had a fight, at that . . . And that goes for all of the earnest young local boxers, who give the fans a run for their money while the Gorilla Joneses flit from town to town putting the game on the fritz . . . Anyone who says the Gorilla was giving his best against Freeman wouldn't know a ham from a sausage . . . Marcus Nole, Negro southpaw middleweight puncher, who boxed around here a year or so ago, now is a sensation in California, fighting out of Fresno under the name of Michigan Joe Gans . . . He has won his last 10 bouts with knockouts.

A letter from C. B. Nelson, of Beaverdale, Pa., evoked by that of R. B. Drain, of Swissvale, which appeared in Vignettes last week, in which Notre Dame was depicted as having played only three tough games this fall and therefore not being entitled to national championship consideration, takes a healthy dig at Pitt and the Pittsburgh newspapers for "ballyhooing" Pitt and its athletes and winds up with the sincere hope that Southern California completely erases Pitt from the picture by a score of from 20 to 0 to 60 to 0.

According to Mr. Nelson's letter, Pitt is great merely because the Pittsburgh newspapers say so, it is the fault of the local newspapers that they are given national championship ranking, and the All-America players of the Panthers are made by newspaper decree even before the season opens . . . He says Pitt's so-called "suicide" schedule of the past season was a lot of hogwash, that Pitt also played only three hard games, with Notre Dame, Army and Ohio State, and compares the Panthers' 18-13 victory over Army with Notre Dame's 21-0 triumph over the same team and Pitt's 6-0 win over Carnegie Tech with Notre Dame's 42-0 victory over the Skibos, but neglects to add that when Pitt played Notre Dame the score was 12-0, Pitt . . . Such other opponents as Ohio Northern, West Virginia, Nebraska, Penn and Carnegie Tech wouldn't be a "suicide" schedule for some of the smaller colleges in Western Pennsylvania, he says.

It seems Mr. Nelson was all riled up by what Mr. Drain said, and he probably feels better now that it's out of his system. . . . We're glad he's not sore at us, and we certainly are glad to know that our influence is such that we can make national champions and All-Americans just by wishing them or writing them down or snapping our fingers. . . . That knowledge ought to be worth a raise even in these times.

A swell way to waste space is to devote it to the Madison Square Garden vs. Jack Dempsey heavyweight ballyhoo, with Dempsey having a Max Schmeling-Max Baer fight on his hands and shopping around for some place to go in hock for it, and the Garden having Jack Sharkey, the champion, and no challenger in sight. . . . They'll wind up li'l pals together, so who cares about the mean things they're saying about one another now?

QUINTERO TOPS GARDEN CARD

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

Two 10-round bouts will be offered at Motor Square Garden New Years night, with Manuel Quintero, of Florida, victor over both Tommy Freeman and Gorilla Jones, the Christmas headliners there, in the top spot against an opponent to be selected, and Battling Gizzy boxing Louie Disantis, of Cleveland, in the co-feature.

Just why the Garden management doesn't close a Quintero-Frankie Goosby match, demanded by the fans when Quintero was introduced Christmas afternoon with the announcement that he was to be used in the next show, is a mystery. Instead, the club is dickering around for Eddie Ran and others and even is considering tossing in Tiger Joe Randall as a last resort, after this match was made for the Arena Friday night and then discarded. Goosby has won his spurs in local rings and will have to be matched against a good opponent in his next start—and here is a "natural" that the fans themselves are asking.

Jimmy Belmont, of Braddock, and Alabama Kid, of Dover, O., who recently stopped him in six rounds at Dover, come together again in the eight-round second bout at the Garden and there will be a six-round opener.

The Arena's bill for Friday night also is complete with the exception of one battle. Davy Grove and Pee Wee Jarrell meet in a return bout in the windup. Clare Repole and Al Parone are in the second bout, and Curly Klaas and Chuck Mullins box the opener. The semi-final remains to be arranged.

C. C. N. Y. WINS

BALTIMORE, Dec. 28.—(AP.)—Nat Holman's City College of New York basketball machine ran smoothly into a 45-to-29 victory over the Baltimore University courtmen here last night.

TULANE BEATEN

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 28.—(AP.)—The University of Georgia, overcame a lead in the second half of its basketball game with Tulane University last night to pull through with a 28-to-20 victory.

JACK TENDERS TAR OFFER

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—(AP.)—Jack Dempsey has wired Jack Sharkey in Boston an offer to defend his heavyweight championship in September against either Max Schmeling or Max Baer.

Dempsey, in his debut as a "big league" promoter, already has matched Baer and Schmeling for a 15-round match in June, either in Chicago or New York.

Dempsey said he had received a telegram from George F. Getz, Chicago sportsman, who aided Tex Rickard in the promotion of the second Tunney-Dempsey bout, asking that consideration be given Chicago as a site for the Baer-Schmeling match as a World Fair feature.

Johnny Buckley, manager of Sharkey, announced in Boston last night that the champion would not box for Dempsey under any consideration and that Schmeling is out as a challenger for breaking away from Madison Square Garden, with which Sharkey is contracted to defend his title on or before June 30, 1933. The statement branded Schmeling, from whom Sharkey won the title a "quitter."

BRAVES LEAD, PIRATES SEVENTH IN TEAM FIELDING

CUBS' RECORD IS BROKEN BY BOSTON CLUB

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Earl Grace

Comparatively loose fielding on the part of this year's Pirates is reflected in the official National League fielding averages given out for publication today. The Buccos finished seventh in team fielding, the Phillies being the only team to outdo them in poor defense work. The Pittsburgh team average was approximately .969. The Braves established a new fielding record for the league with a club card of .976. The Cubs held the previous mark of .975.

Earl Grace, the beautifully consistent catcher of the Pirates, had no part in the loose play of the team. He led the catchers of the league in fielding as he set a new record. Grace made only one error all season, this being committed on September 8, while the Pirates were playing the Dodgers in Brooklyn. Earl accepted 444 chances without a slip, the string beginning in 1931 when he did duty for the Cubs.

MARANVILLE LEADER

Rabbit Maranville showed the way to the second basemen of the league with a mark of .975. Maranville made only 22 misplays in almost 900 chances. Don Hurst, of the Phillies, finished in front of the first basemen; Pinkey Whitney, of the Phillies, led the third basemen and Walter Berger, of the Braves, set the pace for the outfielders, although Lloyd Waner, of the Pirates, had more chances than any of the pasture stars.

HURLERS 'PERFECT'

Twenty-one pitchers fielded for 1000, the leadership being gained by Frederick A. Heimach, Brooklyn, who handled 51 chances without error, the second year in a row he has fielded perfectly.

EASTERN NET CONFAB SET

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Rumblings and reverberations from the tennis realm catch the ear of local net fans in spite of holiday diversions. Word freshly received here includes news to the effect that the annual meeting of the Middle States L. T. A. sectional group with which the local organization is affiliated, has been set for Saturday, January 21, at the Penn Athletic Club in Philadelphia.

Questions of keen importance, several of which are apt to affect vitally the interests of the game in Western Pennsylvania, will be discussed at the Quaker City conclave, though whether or not the P. T. A. will be represented, as it was a year ago, by President J. Phillips Davis, is a matter that will be decided at the winter gathering of the home court clans next month.

OFFICERS NOMINATED

Featuring the Philly get-together will be election of officers and executive committeemen. Results of the deliberations of the Middle States nominating committee are as follows: W. D. R. Evans, Narberth, president; Samuel H. Collom, Germantown Cricket Club, vice president; John C. Parry, Jr., treasurer; Joseph Morgantown, Germantown Cricket Club, secretary; A. J. Batty and T. C. Leonards, Philadelphia T. A.; Elgin D. Ramsauer, Delaware L. T. A.; George W. Reily, Susquehanna Valley T. A.; W. C. Cummings, Western New Jersey League; J. Phillips Davis, Pittsburgh T. A.; Frank Zook and William Kraft, Philadelphia Inter-Club Association, and Harry Wieland, Lehigh Valley T. A., members of the executive committee; Paul W. Gibbons, sectional delegate to U. S. L. T. A.

Meanwhile, here in town, Chairman Bob Schmertz, of the P. T. A. ranking committee, announces that confabs of his expert array will be begun either late this week or early next. It is a foregone conclusion that Dr. John O'Loughlin, 1931 premier, will be returned atop the list once more. O'Loughlin was beaten but once in singles in 1932. His lone setback was suffered in the West Penn final, wherein his conqueror, B. F. Arkle, was not a home performer. Subsequently, O'Loughlin landed honors of the Westmoreland County, Western Maryland, Morgantown Country Club invitation, and Stanton Heights invitation tournaments. He also was undefeated in seven contests for the champion P. A. A. squad in the P. T. A. Inter-Club League.

REED, HARRISON WIN

W. McCook Reed, city singles champion, and Ray Harrison, captured the Pittsburgh Golf Club doubles squash racquets crown by trimming Jim Ebbert and Joe Oliver, three games to two, in the final.

The losers led, two games to one, at the rest period and carried the fourth canto to 17-15 ere the ultimate victors were able to square the contest. The Golf Club aims to stage an invitation racquets tourney the week-end after next.

Tunney's First and Last Defeat—By Greb

HARRY GREB — GENE TUNNEY

Gene Tunney suffered only one defeat in his entire fistic career, and it was administered by the late Harry Greb, of Pittsburgh, in the first of their five meetings. He tells about this battle, waged in the old Madison Square Garden, New York, in the spring of 1922, in today's installment of his life story below. This is an International News Photo Service picture.

GENE TUNNEY TELLS STORY OF LIFE

The Bloody Greb Fight — Gene Collapses After Battle—Contract Sought by Abe Attel—Other Bouts

—By GENE TUNNEY—
Retired Heavyweight Champion

CHAPTER TWENTY

It is impossible to describe the bloodiness of this fight. My seconds were unable to stop either the bleeding from the cut over my left eye, which involved a severed artery, or the bleeding consequent to the nose fractures. Doc Bagley, who was my chief second, made futile attempts to congeal the nose - bleeding by pouring adrenalin into his hand and having me snuff it up my nose. This I did round after round. The adrenalin, instead of coming out through the nose again, ran down my throat with the blood and into my stomach.

Gene Tunney

At the end of the twelfth round, I believed it was a good time to take a swallow of this brandy and orange juice. It had hardly got to my stomach when the ring started whirling around. The bell rang for the thirteenth round; the seconds pushed me from my chair. I actually saw two red opponents. How I ever survived the thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth rounds is still a mystery to me. At any rate, the only consciousness I had was to keep trying. I knew if I ever relaxed I would either collapse or the referee would stop the brutality.

GREB KISSED BY SECONDS

After the gong sounded, ending the fifteenth round, I shook hands with Greb and mumbled through my smashed and swollen lips:

"Well, Harry, you were the better man tonight!"

And I mean that literally.

Harry missed the subtlety of the remark, for he said:

"Won the championship."

And he was dragged from me by one of his seconds, who placed a kiss on his unmarked countenance.

I discovered through the early part of that fight that I could lick Harry Greb. As each round went by, battered and pummeled from post to post as I was, this discovery gradually became a positive certainty in my mind. I was conscious of the handicaps under which I entered the ring. They were not the things that led me to this conviction, however. Many boxers upon entering important matches suffer from sore hands, cut eyes or something of the sort. There is nothing unusual about that. But I realized that a broken nose and a four-inch cut through arteries over the eye in the first round of a 15-round match are at least uncommon and of sufficient seriousness to completely change the current of events.

COLLAPSES AFTER BOUT

I left the ring and walked up the aisle toward my dressing room. This was negotiated only through nervous excitement. I climbed the flight of stairs, each step getting higher and more difficult, and, as I got near the top, the reaction set in. I collapsed; the top step was impossible. I could not make it.

The boys carried me into my dressing room and set me up on the rubbing table. Immediately the hands of support left me. I fell back with a thud, the back of my head striking the table. I lay perfectly conscious of everything that was taking place, but unable to move a muscle. Nature surrendered.

Everything but the right thing was done to stimulate me. All I needed was a stomach pump to remove the mixture of blood, adrenalin chloride, brandy and orange juice. It was two hours before I had sufficiently revived to be led out of the old Garden. Dr. William Walker had administer a medicine that functioned like sea-sickness.

"TOUGH" ON BAGLEY

After we were seated in the taxi, it was suggested we drive up through Central Park to see if the air would revive me. As the taxi got under way, Doc Bagley, my manager and chief second, turned to me and, with a gesture of wiping his brow, said:

"What a job you gave me tonight! I am all in! Do you know that we used six bottles of adrenalin chloride trying to stop those cuts?"

I was too weary to get angry. Doc felt that my part was comparatively easy. All I did was bleed. I felt an emotion that was akin to sorrow for Bagley. Poor Doc. It was a pathetic exhibition of self-interest.

It was perfectly true that they had used six bottles of adrenalin chloride. I always had two in my medicine kit for every fight. The additional four had been sent for during the early part of the fight by Abe Attel, who was sitting at the ringside. Abe came into my dressing room after the fight, and in great excitement said:

"Kid, you're the gamest fighter I ever saw. I lost $2,500 on you, but to hell with it. In the second round I sent out for four bottles of adrenalin chloride and gave them to Bagley. I never saw any cuts like them! You were the better man tonight, and the gamest in the world!"

He kissed my battered face! A curious demonstration for honest Abe.

PRAISED BY ATTEL

Turning to Bagley, he said:

"Doc, will you sell your contract with this kid, to me? He certainly will be the next heavyweight champion of the world!"

The day following the Greb match, I went down to the office of the Boxing Commission to receive my check for $22,500, and placed on file a challenge to Greb for a return fight, backed with a check for $2,500.

Before the Boxing Commission would accept my challenge for a return match with Greb, a Deputy Boxing Commissioner advised that a copy of a written contract between Bagley and me must be on file with the commission. In other words, he insisted on a written contract between a boxer and his manager. This was in accordance with a commission ruling. I cannot imagine anything more illegal or unfair than this ruling. I do not believe the deputy and Bagley arranged this between them. However, a commission form of contract was quickly procured by the Deputy Commissioner so that I could see the form of contract that the commission recognized.

CONTRACT COSTS $5,000.

Rather than postpone filing my challenge, I signed one of these blank forms, though Bagley and I had a verbal agreement. Several months later, when I wished to sever business relations with Bagley, that signature cost me $5,000.

My next consideration was to get my body and face restored to normal after the pummeling and battering that I had received from Greb during those 15 bloody rounds. I did not recover as quickly as I expected. The strain of the fight and the loss of blood left me weak and exhausted. I was compelled to remain in bed for a week when I returned to Red Bank. A blood tonic prescribed by Dr. Shea soon fixed me up. In a few weeks' time I was again hale and hearty and ready for renewed action.

FOULED BY KISER

During the next two months I engaged in three matches. I stopped Ray Thompson in Long Branch, N. J.; boxed Charley Weinert 12 rounds in Newark, and Tommy Loughran eight rounds in Philadelphia. In a match with Fay Kiser at Rockaway, L. I., after three or four rounds of butting with his head, which laid both sides of my chin open, I called the referee over to my corner and asked him to please instruct Kiser to put a boxing glove on his head or else stop using it. The referee replied:

"I have cautioned him about it several times, Gene, but I can't do nothin' with him."

I said:

"If you can't, I will!"

The first clinch we got into in the next round Kiser again came up with the top of his hard head against my bleeding chin, whereupon I felt along his face for his left eye, pretending I wanted to poke my right thumb into it. He yelled to the referee:

"He's gouging me!"

"Go ahead and fight!" answered the referee.

Some brief and pointed comments on foul ring tactics, a tribute to Chuck Wiggins' sportsmanship, and his dropping of Bagley for Billy Gibson as manager will feature the next chapter in Tunney's account of his ring experiences.

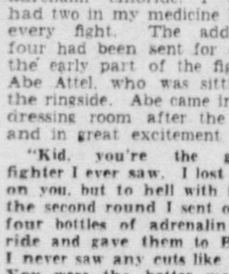
Max Hannum to Discuss Basketball for Seals



Max Hannum

The college basketball situation as it concerns teams and players in the Pittsburgh district will get the once-over from Max Hannum, Carnegie Tech's new head coach, who also is a floor official, as a feature of the weekly radio program of the Trained Seals of the Sports Department of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph over WCAE, at 7 o'clock tonight.

Hannum, a former local sports scribe, knows the basketball sport from all angles and his talk will be listened to eagerly by followers of the game.

Also on the program will be a crossfire between Harry Keck, sports editor of the Sun-Telegraph, and Herb McGee, WCAE announcer. Miss Marian Salmon will be at the piano.

PITT BEHIND TROJANS IN AIR GAME

By JESS CARVER

Howard Jones

It looks like the aerial traffic in the vicinity of the Rose Bowl at Pasadena next Monday afternoon may be a mite heavy.

Those fortunate or unfortunate (it depends on which side you were rooting) enough to see the last Pitt-Southern California contest (was it?) in the Pasadena Rose Bowl, which isn't much of a bowl and certainly doesn't bring to mind much in the way of a rose or roses, will recall that the Trojans' forward passing attack put the kibosh on the Panthers. Pitt's aerial defense that day was about as formidable as my Aunt Susie's left hook. It came pretty close to being a total loss.

TROJAN RECORD BEST

Now it dooks like history might do a swell job of repeating itself, except that with the Panthers being as good as they are this year, it is difficult to conceive of their being punched around by any 47-14 score. Of course, you never can tell . . . back in 1928 what did we care for nickel hamburgers?

Checking over the forward passing figures of the two teams for this year, it looks like the Southern Cals are going to have the old bump on the Pitts again. Pitt has had more passes completed against it, has completed less and except for the game against Army, hasn't been so hot in advancing the ball via the air route.

Of the 1,457 yards gained against the Panthers during the 10 games of the past season, 718 of them, almost half, were made on completed forward flips. In nine games, Southern California allowed 1,475 yards to be made against it, but only 517 were the result of their opponents' aerial game.

Fifty of 159 forward passes were completed against Pitt. A dozen were intercepted. The Trojans, on the other, allowed only 37 of 128 attempted aerial thrusts to connect and intercepted 21 others.

On the other side of the ledger, the Trojans, in winning all their nine games, completed 30 of their 88 tosses for a gain of 1,738 yards and only four of the attempted heaves were intercepted.

EIGHT BROUGHT SCORES

Eight of Troy's 24 touchdowns during the past season were directly the result of passes, two came from intercepted passes, and too many others were made possible via the air.

Pitt, by comparison in 10 games, picked up only 517 yards with 23 passes completed out of 86 attempts.

Four of Southern California's seven touchdowns at Pitt's expense three years ago were directly the result of passes, while another long flip carried the ball to the two-yard line, which in that game, was first cousin to a touchdown.

With the Trojans lacking the old power of former years but having much more deception, it is logical to suppose they will spring another barrage of passes on the Panthers. Homer Griffith, Bob McNeish and Irvine Warburton all can throw the ball well.

Any of these aerial artists are apt to be in the backfield at the same time most of the afternoon, which will be something for Coach Jock and his lads to muse over during the remaining days before the game.

HELLER DEFENSE STAR

The Trojans may win Monday's ball game, and if they do, fine—more power to 'em. But here is one thing they are going to discover—that they will be up against the best defensive halfback they've met in many a moon. This halfback is our own Warren Heller. It is seldom that a back gains All-America honor on his defensive ability, but that is just about what happened to Mister Heller this year.

Heller's a fine offensive player, too, don't be forgetting that when you lay your bets on Monday's contest, but back of that line, he's a terror. He can crack 'em down so they stay cracked, and smart quarterbacks do NOT pass in his direction.

SEEDED TENNIS STARS WIN

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Seeded favorites, included Marco Hecht, of Penn, the defending champion, prepared today to continue their battling for the National Junior and Boys' indoor tennis championships.

Led by Hecht, the seeded stars came through their opening matches yesterday without mishap.

The fields of 138 were reduced to 32 players in each division at the end of the first day with Hecht, twice winner of the Junior crown, aiming at his third victory to tie the record of Vincent Richards. Hecht defeated Bill Whyte, of Swarthmore College, in a 20-minute match in love sets.

FAVORITES WIN

Richard K. Hebard, of the Hill School, Pottstown, Pa.; Giles Verstraten, of New York; Bernard Friedman, of the University of North Carolina; John Nogrady, of New York; Daniel Freedman, New York; Willard E. Ingalls, Jr., Harvard, and Sumner Rotman, Harvard, the other seeded favorites, in that order, also won their first-round matches in straight sets.

Crossman, Jr., of White Plains, N. Y., second seeded boy player, defeated Joseph Miller, of New York, 6-1, 6-1.

JOANNA PALFREY WINS

BROOKLINE, Mass., Dec. 28.—(AP.)—The four seeded players in the eleventh National Girls' Indoor tennis tournament lived up to expectations in winning their opening matches on the Longwood Cricket Club covered court.

Miss Joanna Palfrey, of Sharon, top-seeded, overwhelmed Betty Allen, of Brookline, 6-1, 6-0, in the first day play. Miss Lucy Fowle, of Winchester, second seeded, won from Miss Barbara Allen, of Brookline, in love sets in the first round and then took a second round match from Miss Sally Jones, of Brookline, 6-0, 6-4.

SPORT LEADERS BACK STAGG

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—(AP.)—Leaders of American sport gathered around 71-year-old Amos Alonzo Stagg to pay him tribute, and at the same time attack bitterly the evils against which the "old man of the midway" has been fighting for 40 years or more.

Retired now because of his age after four decades at the head of University of Chicago football, the stocky, white-haired, but still vibrant old man sat at the head of the table at the annual Sportsmanship Brotherhood luncheon yesterday and heard himself extolled as the greatest living teacher of the true principles of sportsmanship.

His life work at Chicago, his athletic career at Yale, formed the text for comparison with evils of the present day that prompted Prof. Philip Badger, at New York University, to predict that unless proselyting disappears from intercollegiate football the game will be dead in 10 years, or else frankly in college as a professional sport.

Chancellor Charles W. Flint, of Syracuse University, declared that reorganization and a "new deal" were the moods of the hour in all branches of activity.

Ice Racers Split In Garden Tests

Bobby McLean, of Chicago, and Ben O'Sickey, of Cleveland, nationally-known ice skater, have issued a challenge to local speed skaters for a free-for-all race on the Duquesne Garden ice tonight.

In two races yesterday, the pair split even. McLean defeated O'Sickey in a half-mile event last night in 1:15 3-5 after O'Sickey had beaten him in a quarter-mile sprint in the afternoon in 38 3-5 seconds.

CARRIERS LEAD STOCK PRICE ADVANCE

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—(AP.)—Aggressive buying of the rails gave the stock market its best boost today in more than a fortnight.

The improvement in the market indicated that year-end tax selling had been virtually completed. Professionals were encouraged to make bullish efforts in the carrier group by favorable carloadings reports. Chemicals and miscellaneous industrials also developed strength.

The pronounced strength of New York Central revived the old report in Wall street that sources close to L. F. Loree were buying, but this still lacked confirmation. Probably the rails reflected as much as anything an oversold condition, resulting from the recent gossip over possible reorganizations in 1933. November earnings reports continued to reflect the successful reduction of expenditures, and last week some roads actually handled more cars than in the like period of last year, notably the Pennsylvania.

Chemicals have been helped by favorable analyses of the industry, stressing the relative success with which earning power had been retained. The leading chemical companies continue to pay dividends, although some are not being earned. Allied Chemical ordered its regular quarterly disbursement of $1.50 a share.

Some disapointment was expressed in Wall street at indications that high Democratic political quarters were in disagreement as to how the budget should be balanced. Nevertheless, it was pointed out that hope of balancing it at the present session of Congress had been meager. The weekly consolidated condition statement of Reserve member banks in 101 leading cities was interpreted favorably, inasmuch as it showed an increase of $37,000,000 in loans, of which $28,000,000 was in "other" or commercial loans. Preceding weeks had seen an unwelcome contraction of bank credit.

BUSINESS

Misunderstanding Still Exists on New Tax Law

—By GEORGE H. SNYDER—

CHANGES IN THE new income tax law in methods of deducting losses from the sale of securities still are resulting in widespread confusion among tax payers.

The new law creates a distinction between two types of losses from the sale of securities. The first type consists of securities sold in 1932, but which had been held more than two years. The second type consist of securities sold in 1932 but which had been held less than two years.

In the case of securities held more than two years, the losses are to be deducted in either of two ways. But the choice of the two methods does not rest with the individual taxpayer. The method to be used is the one which creates the higher tax. This is a distinct departure from the old law which, in optional cases of computing taxes, usually permitted the taxpayer to use the method creating the smaller tax.

* * *

Two Methods Must Be Tried

THE TAXPAYER with losses on securities held more than two years must compute his tax in two ways in order to determine the higher tax which is the amount he must report.

In the first method, he deducts the loss from the sale of securities from his general income and then computes his tax. This procedure is practically the same as under the old law.

In the second method, he computes his tax, disregarding the loss from the sale of securities held more than two years. Then he takes 12½ per cent of the loss from the sale of securities held more than two years and deducts this from his tax, not from his net income. In view of the fact that this method provides for a direct deduction from tax instead of from net income before computing the tax, the remaining balance may not be carried over to future years.

* * *

Other Losses Must Balance Profits

LOSSES ON THE sale of securities held less than two years are not deductible unless they can be balanced against profits from the sale of securities. Losses of this type, however, can be carried over into future years.

In other words, if a taxpayer lost $10,000 in the stock market in 1932 on securities held less than two years, and had a profit of $5,000 on other securities, he could deduct $5,000 of his losses since they are balanced by his profits. He could carry the remaining $5,000 of losses over to his report for next year for deduction against future profits.

Traders' Interest Turns To Rails for Cue On Next Move

With the railroad stocks resting to all intents and purposes practically on the previous resistance levels, that group is the focus of speculative interest at the moment. That is particularly true in so far as the chart-reading element is concerned, and in lieu of much in the way of stimulus from outside news, charts these days are receiving no little attention. Industrials, it is pointed out, are comfortably removed from their previous resistance points, but the rails which have provided the cue for intermediate movements practically without exception have been critically situated for several days.

Steel output tapered slightly again, although the current rate, 13 per cent, is still slightly above the record low of 12 per cent, touched early last summer. Complete holiday shutdown at many mills has been in force, but sustained activity at the two leading producing centers for automobile steel, Detroit and Cleveland, have tended to hold the general average up better than expected. Another element making for the appearance of stability has been advance rolling of tin plate for future delivery. The industry will turn into the new year with its backlog at low levels and lacking definite promise of sizeable expansion.

A London broker, arriving in New York to get first-hand information on securities and industries, says: "My firm has an increasing number of clients who want to invest a large part of their money in the United States, and I have decided to spend a few months here to make investigations. I believe that in the next 12 months millions of British capital will find its way into American securities, even as it has done in the last year. I find already a lot of pessimism in Wall street, but, strange as it may seem, and perhaps because we are not so close to the picture, a majority of Englishmen are not at all bearish on better-class American securities at these prices, and regard nearly all of these as selling at absurd prices."

Charles Donnelly, president of Northern Pacific Railway Company, said today November gross of the road was $822,000 under that for the same month last year. From 55 to 60 per cent of the grain in Northern Pacific's territory, he asserted, was still being held in warehouses because of poor prices. Usually at this time about half the crop has been moved. No action has yet been taken on the dividend of Northwestern Improvement Company, a subsidiary.

Having led them arket down on the recent gradual descent New York Central proved the pivot on which the list turned for a fairly substantial rally today. The shift in the trend came at a propitious time, inasmuch as rail shares were hovering around their previous resistance levels. The turn in Central came with the development of a brisk demand for that stock, with one house taking upward of 15,000 shares in the course of the morning. The rally coincided with the publication of the road's November operating results, which were surprisingly favorable, showing net operating income of $1,286,000, against $539,000 in the same month last year.

The abrupt reversal of trend in New York Central was the signal for a brisk covering movement in most directions. Demand from shorts naturally was most effective in the instance of those stocks which had been under greatest pressure on occasion recently. Steel common snapped back sharply after having dipped early to new low levels for the movement, while American Telephone, Allied Chemical, Case Threshing Machine, Auburn Automobile and other popular trading mediums rebounded rather easily. In the rail group leaders like Atchison, Union Pacific, Lackawanna and Pennsylvania were featured.

MARY FAITH

-:- Story of a Girl With Husband Who Wouldn't Grow Up -:-

By BEATRICE BURTON

Mary Faith Finds Housework More Enjoyable Than Job at Office

CHAPTER XVII.

Claire put both of her arms around Kim and closed her eyes as they danced. She was a little girl and her head came just to Kim's shoulder. It looked very bright against the dark blue of his coat.

Sitting in a corner of the blue davenport, watching her, Mary Faith began to feel dull and uncomfortable and out of place. She knew that she had nothing in common with these friends of Kim's. Claire had told her that she was "funny" and "old-fashioned" because she wouldn't play cards on Sunday.

"What she meant was that I'm slow and narrow-minded," Mary Faith said to herself. "But if I am, so was Kim until just lately."

In the days of their engagement Kim had never been much of a drinker or card player. Certainly he never had played cards for money . . .

"What are you looking so melancholy about, Mary Faith?" Jack Maldon came in from the kitchen with a tray of ice and glasses and set it on the mantelshelf.

"Aren't we going to play bridge?" he asked, and dropped down beside her on the sofa.

"No. I don't play cards on Sunday . . . I'm sorry."

"Would you like to dance?"

DISLIKES CLAIRE

Mary Faith shook her head and sent him a troubled apologetic smile. "I don't even dance on Sunday, Jack. I'm afraid I'm a terrible spoil-sport."

"No," he said gravely, "I think you're all right . . . I get a little tired of doing things all the time, myself. It's a relief just to sit and talk and look at the fire sometimes, isn't it? Even if it's just gas-logs."

At 10 o'clock Kim and Mary Faith went home.

"Well, what do you think of the Maldons?" Kim asked as soon as they were out of the little flat. "Wasn't the word 'pep' just coined for Claire? She's a dandy girl, isn't she?"

"Isn't she pretty?" Mary Faith answered him with a question.

She was never going to let Kim know that she did not like Claire Maldon and wasn't at ease when she was with her. She was going to accept all of his friends and make them welcome in her home . . . She was going to make life peaceful and pleasant for him always.

"I enjoy going up to their flat more than any place I know," Kim was saying slowly and a bit thickly. "There's always the makings of a good time there. Claire sure does know how to do things, doesn't she? Wasn't that a slick little supper she got up?"

AUNT LEAVES

"Delicious . . . But I wish you wouldn't drink, Kim. You never used to drink."

"I don't drink now," he said. "Not what you could really call drinking.

The next morning Aunt Ella packed up her things and went home to Garrettsville."

"I'm doing it a-purpose," she told Mary Faith in her sharp, kindly way. "If Amelia has to depend on you to take care of her for a few days she won't be so high-and-mighty with you. You and she will get to be pretty good friends if there's nobody but the two of you in the house all day—so I'll just move myself out of the way and give you a try." What Aunt Ella lacked in English she made up in good hard common sense.

All that week Mary Faith took care of Mrs. Farrell. She made her bed, brought her her meals of chicken broth and milk toast and gave her the medicine that Dr. Thatcher prescribed for her.

Dr. Thatcher had been the Farrells' family doctor ever since Kim's babyhood. He was a tall, broad-shouldered man with a heavy, handsome face and iron-gray hair. Mary Faith liked his deep, low voice and his air of authority.

"He's a widower," Mrs. Farrell told her, "and they say that half the nurses in town have their caps set for him. But I doubt that he'll ever marry again—and if he does it'll be some woman his own age he'll pick, I imagine."

Every morning, when she was expecting him, she would sit up in bed, brushing her thick hair, winding it around her head in a coronet braid that was very becoming to her, and powdering her face. Once Mary Faith came into the room and found her rubbing violet toilet water into the palms of her hands.

BEGINS HOUSEWORK

"Please don't get it into your head that I'm fixing myself up because the doctor's coming," she said sharply. "I just happen to like a little perfume now and then. It makes the air in the room so fresh."

On Friday Dr. Thatcher told her that she was so much better he wouldn't have to come to see her any more, and on Saturday she got out of bed.

Mary Faith sent for her trunks and her cedar chest that afternoon and she unpacked them while Mrs. Farrell sat on the living room couch and showed her where to hang the Simon etching and the bookshelves.

"I thought my mother would raise Cain when you brought your things into the house," Kim said the next morning when Mary Faith brought him his coffee. "She would have, too, if you hadn't asked her where to put everything and kidded her along the way you did."

"I wasn't 'kidding' her, Kim. I just want her to feel that she and I are partners. Women work together in offices without quarreling and there's no reason why they shouldn't do it in houses. You'll see that she and I will get along all right, if you just give us time."

Mrs. Farrell said that she felt shaky after her illness, and she spent most of the next week reading the books that Mary Faith had brought from Mrs. Puckett's. She sat all day in her easy chair at the front window, with her feet in her little stool, lost to the world in the pages of "The Duchess of Wrexe or Clayhanger."

All that week Mary Faith had the flat to herself. And to the work in it she brought the same neatness and deftness that she had given to her work in Mark Nesbit's office. But she enjoyed it as she never had enjoyed office work. She took a keen pleasure in the polishing of silver, the washing and ironing of the bedraggled kitchen curtains, the mixing of a salad dressing.

She had a system, too. Kim was usually out of the house by a quarter to nine, and nine o'clock found her in the kitchen washing the breakfast dishes. The damp gray dishcloth disappeared from its nail under the kitchen sink and a brand-new dish mop took its place. Burnt matches no longer lay scattered on the floor under the gas range. The tea towels were washed out after every meal and hung on a line on the back porch.

After lunch she read or rested for an hour or two. Then she took a bath and dressed herself for the rest of the day, carefully brushing her dark hair and powdering her face, making herself as attractive as she could for Kim's eyes. Along about four she would walk down to Kilbam's grocery and market at the corner and buy things for dinner.

Synopsis

Mary Faith gave up her position as secretary to Mark Nesbit when Kim Farrell sets their wedding date. His attitude changes when his mother objects, and the engagement is broken. Heartbroken, Mary Faith returns to her office. Mark, taken ill, has Mary Faith driven to his country home daily for two weeks. He tells her of his love for her. Mary Faith meets Kim with a girl. Next morning, Kim calls at Mary Faith's boarding house. He assures here of his love and proposes immediate marriage. After a hasty marriage they live their honeymoon in ecstasy. They return to town and find Kim's mother ill. Mary Faith is called a "Puritan" by Kim's friends, Claire and Jack Maldon, at a Sunday night party when she refuses to play cards or dance. Kim dances with Claire.

Now Go On

Mary Faith began to feel dull and uncomfortable and out of place.

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

Quiet reigned in most of the homes of the members of the Sun-Telegraph - Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club yesterday. Sunday and Monday were of course, busy days for the youngsters. In fact it would be safe to say that for the members their celebration started with the meetings of the club on Saturday.

Every neighborhood Warner Theater where the Junior Komic Club meetings are held broke all attendance records Saturday. Every member was present and many of them brought along boys and girls who were visiting them, or who were not members of the club. Many of the visitors Saturday before they had left the theater enrolled in the Junior Komic Club.

After the meetings and the exchange of gifts many of the members went to their homes, to await Santa's visit and it is safe to say that many a youngster who was bound and determined to stay up until Santa arrived fell asleep in the chair and was tucked into bed by mother long before the expected visit. And when they woke up Christmas morning they made a rush to see what jolly old St. Nick had left.

LARGE PROGRAM

But to get back to the Saturday meetings for a minute. Manager Louis Gilbert of the Memorial Theater, McKeesport, had arranged an elaborate stage show for the youngsters with the following taking part:

SPECIAL SHOW

It was a great show as you can see by the above program and after the finale, Manager Gilbert announced that as a special Christmas gift from the personnel of the Memorial Theater to the members of the Junior Komic Club, that they would have a free Christmas show for them on Christmas morning at 10 o'clock. This brought cheers from the audience and every member said that that was the nicest present the Memorial Theater could give them. And they all attended.

Well, yesterday, the mechanical and electric trains remained stopped, the covers on all the games and the "dollies" stayed in bed in many homes. The youngsters were all tired out and many of them spent the day sleeping, but they are young and will be back at it again today and every day from now until school opens, the Tuesday after New Years.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAYS

Congratulations to the following boys and girls, all members of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club, who are celebrating their birthdays today:

Manor—Kenneth Samovitch, Hillard Kreimer, Marvin Rink, Jeanne Kalish.

Rowland—Ruth Olive Cost.

Etna—Harris, Geraldine Scherd.

South Hills — Jack Baney, Grace Limk, Jane Glancy.

Belmar — Judith Levine, James Sites, Wallace Miller, Andrew Olwell.

Bugs Baer

The Bug Apologizes Copiously

No man can finish the old year better than by erasing old scores and apologizing to the score-keepers.

Our first humble bow is to the California prune industry. We got your box of prunes in November and they were beautiful. Pardon the month delay in this retraction, but we give everything 30 days' trial including our apologies.

We bid for forgiveness from Primo Carnera. We made the remark figuring your ears were above timber line. But you heard it, thanks to my pals.

Another anemic apology to the Republican National Campaign Committee for thinking they were in earnest with those campaign threats. And a postscript to Carnera again. We can't make his weight.

One liberal dose of back-pedalling to the passenger bus lines and also to the railroads for those articles in June. Fortunately, we were born too late to take a crack at the covered wagon.

To the drys we freely devise and bequeath another one of our weatherbeaten apologies. You might as well have one. Everybody in New York has two. We start the third lap next Monday.

To the Prince of Wales for saying we saw his hoss and knew that he would be along in a minute. That's from around 1920, but we're still getting letters.

We realize that we have stepped on thousands of toes. Our only extentuation is that they were out in the aisle.

We could keep on apologizing for years and never catch up to the demand. If we have ever written anything we are sorry for we assure you we are glad of it. We expect no retroactive apologies from the hundreds of delighted readers who have threatened to kick us to a white froth during the last 12 months. Like the freezing Eskimo who bit the icicle we realize the thing was done in the heat of battle.

But that doesn't prevent us from acting like a gentleman toward the close of a year that will soon be gone. We reserve the privilege of turning over a new leaf next Monday.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

You object to the bullying way in which some traffic officers attack you when you violate a traffic law.

It is admitted that too often these officers assume an uncalled for, arrogant manner.

It is true also that you have tried to be "hard" with officers.

Experience has taught these traffic men that a polite, gentlemanly manner will be imposed upon by the general public.

These supporters of the law are not responsible for the law's provisions.

They are hired to enforce them.

If you are a violator you must expect, at least, a severe reprimand.

Naturally, drivers from other states are more likely to censure the traffic officers who do not make sufficient allowance for their lack of knowledge of local provisions of the law.

Especially if he is doing what is within the law at home, the autoist who is bawled out by a policeman outside his state or city feels he is unjustly dealt with and very likely says so.

This country needs nation-wide rules and regulations for those ordinary conditions to be met in driving.

"MOIST THROAT" FOUND SECRET OF COUGH RELIEF

Your throat and bronchial tubes are lined with millions of pores like tiny bottles continually supplying moisture to the delicate tissues . . . until you "catch cold."

Then these "bottles" get plugged up, phlegm accumulates, affording dangerous germs a breeding place. Your throat feels hot and dry. Tickling, irritation and coughing set in.

Your cough will be cured only when the flow of the natural fluid is increased, loosening the phlegm so that it can be expelled. Many cough "remedies" contain numbing drugs which merely deaden the nerves . . . but don't get at the root of the trouble.

PERTUSSIN, a scientific remedy, which doctors have prescribed for many years, is the extract of a famous herb which opens the tiny glands, stimulates the flow of the throat's natural moisture and brings quick relief. It helps nature heal that cough from the inside out.

When you feel that warning dryness take a few spoons of PERTUSSIN. It's absolutely safe. Sold at all drug stores, 60¢.

Of course it is only a matter of time before foreign nations will be permitted to pay their debts to America in goods.

For example, Britain could make its next $95,000,000 payment by sending us lecturers to talk to club women at two cents a word.

* * *

Or perhaps they could send us $95,000,000 worth of spats to distribute among unemployed bond salesmen.

* * *

And France could send us $19,000,000 worth of Camembert (in place of lecturers).

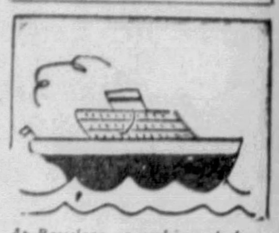
CARICATOURS

2. Spain



At Barcelona, on reaching dock,
Port officers made me grease;
Kept me waiting three hours by the clock
In their old Spanish custom house,
Of Spanish landscapes I've seen a host;
For scenery, they're world beaters:
But make one guess which lured me most,
The scenes or the senoritas?
Yet I took a miss to dine one night,
And though I'm no junior eater,
I saw, by the size of her appetite,
Why they called her "senior eater."
One day at a bull fight, being full
Of vino, ambition gored me;
I jumped down into the ring—the bull
Gave a snort, then sidled toward me.

I sought, by holding his gaze transfixed,
To show him I was the master;
But I must have gotten the signals mixed,
For he only kept coming faster.
Of discontent breed he must have been;
His manner was irritado;
I hesitated but a second—then
Made a break for the palizado.
I flew like a racing taxicab
But the bull kept gaining nearer;
And just as I jumped, I felt a jab
Southwest of the bandolera.
Now, a week later, the wound still aches.
As for where I was hit—don't ask.
I'll only hint that this mantel makes
An excellent writing desk.

Protect Your Home Markets From Cheap Competition—Buy American!

"BUY AMERICAN," as a policy of patriotism, as well as of enlightened self-interest for our people, has met with instantaneous response.

"It is the DISPLACEMENT OF AMERICAN LABOR AND AMERICAN MERCHANDISE by LOW PRICE IMPORTATIONS that plays HAVOC with our economic situation."

These are the words of the United States Commissioner of Customs. He continues:

"IT IS THIS which is DEPRIVING many American men and women of their MEANS OF LIVELIHOOD. The vice presidents of three of the largest rubber companies in the United States told me that 26,000 employes in the rubber boot and shoe industry are affected by the importations now flooding our markets from Japan and Czecho-Slovakia, and that THIS INDUSTRY is threatened with ANNIHILATION."

* * *

RUBBER boots made in Japan are delivered in this country at less than thirty-four cents a pair. We cannot make the same boots for less than ninety-five cents a pair.

The Czecho-Slovakians are able to make rubber boots delivered in this country for $1.16 a pair. We cannot manufacture them at less than $1.48 a pair exclusive of any profit and of all cost of handling and selling.

These wide discrepancies in manufacturing cost are found to exist with reference to almost every article and commodity in general use. They are by no means confined to the small and finished articles of retail trade.

The National Association of Flat Roll Steel Manufacturers estimates that in the year 1931 the importation of 370,000 tons of foreign steel caused the loss of a week's work each to 237,000 men in the steel industry, and to 37,000 miners, with a loss of wages and revenues to the railroads for transporting 550,000 cars at an average of thirty-three tons a car.

It continues that EVERY TON of foreign steel imported in the United States MEANS THE LOSS OF FOUR DAYS' WORK to some steel laborer and a loss to the railroads and their employes of the transportation of four to five tons of raw material necessary to the production of one ton of steel.

This is not the full extent, however, of the loss. Steel and transportation being basic industries, for every such loss as is here indicated there is a proportionate loss to labor and all subsidiary industries which serve the steel industry.

* * *

AMERICAN INDUSTRY AND LABOR ARE BLEEDING AT EVERY PORE. The situation is that of a leaking ship which is taking in water faster than the pumps can pump it out.

The depreciated currencies of Europe and Asia, and their low wage scales, have nullified the protection of our tariff law over a great range of commodities.

A survey made by the United States Department of Labor reveals that the average factory wage in AMERICA is SIXTY CENTS AN HOUR. The corresponding wage in FRANCE is TWELVE CENTS an hour, in ITALY, NINE CENTS and in JAPAN, SEVEN CENTS AN HOUR.

Is it any wonder, in the light of such facts, that, with the unchecked importation of cheap foreign goods and America's unheeded willingness to buy them regardless of the resultant blight upon our own industries, unemployment among us increases, factories close down and the wage fund, which is the life of trade and the well-spring of our prosperity, steadily diminishes?

* * *

THERE ARE numerous causes underlying the prevalent depression. Perhaps no single one is the sole and exclusive source of our ills.

But our patronage of foreign manufacturers, to the sacrifice of our own, is one of the MAJOR CAUSES—this unnecessary competition, which we tolerate, with the debased currencies and cheap labor of other countries, aggravated by their concerted and hostile exclusion of American exports from entry into their markets on any terms.

HERE, HOWEVER, IS A HEAD THAT WE CAN SEE. LET US HIT IT.

For every thrust aimed at our trade and labor, we have at our command a ready and immediate parry.

IF WE CANNOT SELL ABROAD, WE CAN AT LEAST BUY AT HOME.

And above all things, we can stop the expenditure of American dollars in the support and upbuilding of a destructive competition from which the alien workman gathers strength, and the American workman only ruin and hunger.

"BUY AMERICAN" is the test, under the conditions that now exist, of an American's loyalty to his country and to his fellow-countrymen.

* * *

IT SHOULD—and there is every indication that it WILL—unite the well meaning and sound hearted people of this country in a national crusade that is not only economically enlightened but also loyal, human and just.

LOYAL to the AMERICA which has the first claim on our allegiance.

HUMAN—because it takes account of the sad plight of millions of our fellow-citizens, which we can instantly relieve by doing a simple and obviously intelligent thing.

JUST, because work and employment which our country needs, we have no right to withhold when we have the power to bestow.

Pittsburgh Policies

W. R. Hearst Advocates Projects Which Would Be of Immense Benefit to This District

The patriotic policies advocated by William Randolph Hearst in his letter to the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph, published yesterday, would benefit the entire nation, but certain of them would be particularly advantageous to the Pittsburgh district.

Take, for example, the proposed federal flood control of rivers whose overflow is a menace to the lives and property of adjoining communities. Pittsburgh has suffered millions of dollars of loss from periodic floods. The inundation of 1907 put 1,600 acres of the city under water. Engineers employed by Pittsburgh businessmen to study the flood danger said if preventive measures were not adopted we probably would suffer a still worse deluge. One well-known engineer foresees the possibility of water so high that steamboats will be able to pass along Smithfield street.

The Flood Commission of Pittsburgh, after years of study, declares that to safeguard Pittsburgh from such a disaster it is necessary to construct 17 storage reservoirs at the headwaters of the Allegheny and Monongahela rivers to regulate the stream flow, so that the excess water which runs off the watershed at certain seasons of the year, causing floods and interfering with navigation, may be stored, and released during times of drought to assist navigation. United States engineers have indorsed the plan as feasible. The Flood Commission places the cost at $60,000,000.

Another of Mr. Hearst's proposals is for "complete inland waterways projects providing various sections of the country with water communication and the equivalent of sea coasts, thus knitting the nation together and providing work for the unemployed." The canal to connect the Ohio River with Lake Erie, for which Pittsburgh has been campaigning for half a century, is just such a project.

Another Hearst policy is to "complete all necessary developments of rivers and harbors, encouraging shipping and consequent commerce, providing work for the unemployed and stimulating the revival of prosperity." The improvement of the Allegheny River at once comes to mind in this connection.

With a potential navigable length of 214 miles, as against the Monongahela's 130, and with natural resources equal if not superior to those of the sister valley, the Allegheny is improved only from Pittsburgh to Templeton, a distance of 60 miles.

These three projects—the establishment of a system of flood protection reservoirs, the construction of the Lake Erie and Ohio River ship canal, and the improvement of the Allegheny River—would prove profitable, of course, not only to the Pittsburgh district but to the nation as a whole. They are properly federal projects, and the Congressmen of Western Pennsylvania and adjacent districts will serve their communities well by striving diligently and persistently to get these important and useful jobs done without further delay.

Abolish the Position

The Delinquent Tax Collector's Work Can Be Done by The County Treasurer Less Expensively.

Senator James J. Coyne is reported planning to introduce a bill in the Legislature next month to reduce the County Delinquent Tax Collector's fee from 10 to 5 per cent.

Senator W. D. Mansfield is reported to plan to introduce a bill abolishing the position and transferring the duties to the County Treasurer.

Mansfield's plan is the better. The City Treasurer is also the city's delinquent tax collector, and there is no reason why the same system should not be followed in the county.

The Delinquent Tax Collector's fees have amounted to as much as $100,000 a year in recent years. That money ought to be saved for the county.

If it should be found advisable to retain the Delinquent Tax Collector's office as a separate office, the fee system should be abolished and the Collector placed on a salary.

"Woodman, Spare That Tree!"

(Copyright, 1932.)

O woodman, spare that tree,
Touch not a single leaf.
Surf booms upon the lea,
The wind is full of grief.
For years this sturdy form
In stress and strife has stood,
Built for a time of storm
And not for kindling wood.

O woodman, swing your axe
Where hungry vultures feed,
Assail with lusty whacks
The trees of Graft and Greed.
Cut down the trees that bear
Rank fungus by the peck,
But have a heart and spare
The good old Leatherneck.

MARRY-GO-ROUND

By Helen Rowland

When Husbands Are Too Good

One reason why the finest women so often fall for playboys and weaklings, is because three-quarters of a woman's love for a man is maternal love, and she wants something to mother and coddle.

* * *

Most men need to be "mothered," and at one time, all men wanted and expected to be coddled around the house. But, of late, there seems to have arisen a new type of husband, a sort of husband de luxe, who appears to be perfectly capable of fixing his own coffee, drawing his own bath, taking care of his cold and even behaving himself without the aid of a guide or a guardian.

* * *

He is the "self-serving husband"—the kind who may appeal to the modern business wife, but robs the old-fashioned wife of most of her thrills in life.

* * *

The greatest boon a man can confer upon the average woman is to let her "martyrize" herself for him—and then let her blame him for it!

* * *

A woman is always happiest when she is doing something for a man—and complaining about it! When she is "sacrificing" herself for him, worrying about him—or "wearing herself out" for him.

* * *

The "self-serving husband" may be a Precious Jewel, but he takes all the heart out of a normal woman by Waiting on HIMSELF. He packs his own grip, assorts his own laundry and knows just where to put his hand on the aspirin in the dark.

* * *

He is so self-sufficient that he fills a woman with an inferiority complex and makes her feel useless and UN-NEEDED. And to be "needed" is the one thing on earth a normal woman craves most. Even when she is no longer loved and cherished, she can console herself with the thought that she is still "needed" and has her niche to fill in a man's life.

* * *

But the self-serving husband never weakens; not even when he is ill and down and out. He will crawl off in a corner, roll up in a blanket, and ask nothing—but to be LEFT ALONE.

* * *

On the roll of Perfect Husbands, his name should lead all the rest. But fortunately for most women, the self-serving husband is as rare as rubies. Living with him, like living in a good hotel, is easy and pleasant; but it lacks the flavor and excitement of life with a clumsy, careless, helpless grown up baby, who is always losing his collar button, cutting his chin, dropping sparks on his clothes, mussing up his chiffonier drawers and catching cold.

* * *

What the average woman wants is something to coddle and worry over—somebody who submits to her mothering and managing, her scolding and complaining, and admits to the whole wide world that he would be "LOST" without her!

* * *

The "self-serving husband" is an ideal husband only for the Tired Business Woman.

SET APART

By Winifred Black

Someone has put a long, deep dish down in the bottom of the gold fish pool.

There are seeds in the dish and some day some kind of water plant is supposed to rise from the water like one of the nymphs in the Inglesby Legend.

One of the younger set of the gold fish circle has discovered the deep dish and appropriated it for his own.

He swims around with the other gold fish a while and then he haughtily withdraws to his own particular dish and there he stays, about half an inch from the bottom of the dish, fanning his tail and moving his fins and looking out upon his brothers and sisters and uncles and aunts and friends and enemies with a cool, haughty stare.

How he does love to be exclusive.

The water in the deep dish is the same water that fills the regular pool; the air that reaches him there is the same sort of air that keeps the fins of the common herd moving in tranquil delight. When he looks up from his dish he sees above him a circle of blue sky and perhaps a fringe of blue lilies—but the other fish in the plain, everyday pool see the same thing, and they have the advantage of companionship and sympathy.

But the young aristocrat wouldn't go out in the regular pool—no, not for all the fish pools in the world.

He makes me think of rather a sour-faced person I saw in the Pullman car the other day.

The women out in the car were playing bridge together and helping each other alternately to help a young mother take care of her brood of children.

One of them brushed little Emilie's hair, one read a fine tale of Indians and bears and snow in the deep forests to Junior, and the other held the baby and made a nest for it in her loving arms so that the tired young mother could lie down for a while and rest.

The grand lady in the drawing room was alone—all alone—and oh, how she loved it.

I don't think she was tired or had anything particularly deep on her mind, but oh, how she loved to be set apart like one above the ordinary run of humanity.

Poor soul, I couldn't help but be sorry for her.

She really misses such a lot in life—not because she has the comforts of the drawing room when she travels, but because I happen to know that she shuts herself up in solitary grandeur at home and abroad and never knows the comfort of a friendly talk with a simple friend.

Poor thing, she might as well be blind and deaf and dumb for all she knows of real life.

Wouldn't she be surprised if she knew how we felt about it—you and I?

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Somehow I imagined dance halls of New York—the type advertising 50 or more "beautiful hostesses"—were a sort of primrose path to the everlasting bonfire. Many deserve such listing, but several I visited seem as innocuously placid as a side street tea room.

My terpischorean adventures included Roseland and Arcadia on Broadway and the Savoy in Harlem. They open from 2 p. m. until 1 a. m., save the Savoy, which a night a week features a 9 p. m. to 9 a. m. breakfast dance. So far as I could see patrons dance for the sheer joy of dancing.

Dancing, to them, is as recreative as golf to a golfer. Two bands—one "hot" and the other "sweet"—furnish alternative music. Musicians crouch over instruments with half shut eyes. The hostesses are distinguished by evening frocks and a glorious youngness. And there's a head hostess, statuesque and gushing.

The floors are expansive in contrast to those shrunken affairs in night clubs. A patron buys a strip of dime-a-dance tickets, collected as one dances. The hostesses average $6 a night. Much stimulation is embered by a lighting psychology—shading to crepusculence and flaring to brilliance.

About it all is unrelieved sadness. Lonely people wincing at returning to drab furnished rooms. Respectable, but defeated. Always fighting off the murmuring demon of self conscience: How dare you say I am second rate? I never really had a chance! Watch me dance!

A striking surprise of cheap dance halls is the beauty of the girls, a new vision swimming before the eyes each moment. They are mostly from 18 to 24. Often hostesses dance together as though preferring this to dull youths lingering in vague, drifting groups about the floor edge. When music stops, the paid dancer has no use for her partner. She shelves him to join her whispering sisters racked on sidelines—like a row of humming birds on a branch.

Nonsensical stories are the vogue again at dinner parties. Verne Porter tells about the fellow weaving home one dawn with a gash in his forehead. Answering a wifely inquiry as to how he acquired the wound, he stated he bit himself. "But how could you bite yourself there?" He replied: "S'difficult but I stood on a chair." Then, the Lambs tippler who came out of a nap and inquired of the late Grant Clarke: "You know sumpin'? I'd rather dine with Lillian Russell in a thin kimona than with Gen. Grant in full dress uniform."

Raymond Hitchcock used to tell the "sil" about a hat floating down a river. A watcher on shore dived in to salvage it. Swimming alongside, the rescuer lifted the lid only to hear a voice soprano: "Never mind, boys, I'm on horseback."

I met the new Mayor at an informal gathering at the apartment of his long time friend, Maj. Bowes, the other day. He is engaging with the characteristic candor of his type. His expression seems to be perpetually bewildered by one of life's happy accidents. I somehow gathered he would be just as comfortable also at trysts with boys in the back room.

The East River's Suicide Patrol has had exciting rescues this winter. The motor boats roam the stream in search of thieves, rum runners and would-be suicides. On dark nights, lamps flash through darkness and rush to suspicious shadows. Now and then a moan as a falling body splashes. Suicides are easily saved. The instant they strike water they regret.

Ethel Merman's revival of "Eadie Was a Laydee!"—she had class with a capital K—warmed memories for white-haired funsters. It recalled unregenerate days of front doors with chain guards and geranium names frescoed in stained glass. And a pasty pianist, with bare arms fiery with needle dots, drinking endless beers throughout the riotous night.

And in Mamaroneck Sunday, I found one of those satisfying dining rooms, so thoughtlessly outmoded. A beamed roof with tool marks, a red bricked hearth, long refectory table, gaunt clock and early American rocker with a clip squeak.

In such a dining room I used to curl on a horsehair sofa devouring Huck Finn. Often Grandma peered in to observe: "Reading rots the mind, they say." Maybe she was right and that's the matter!
